A Mere 60 Million Mistakes

TORONTO (CP) — Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne says that if three recent surveys are correct, the postal system only makes about 60 million errors a year handling mail.

Speaking to a Liberal party meeting Wednesday, he said the mistakes represent about one per cent of the almost six billion pieces of mail handled yearly by Canada Post.

"How many of you in your businesses can claim such a minimal error rate?" he asked.

Lamontagne said the problem of poor morale among postal workers remains. Many workers do not have the sense of responsibility they should have, an attitude typical of many people in Canada, he said.

RAIL PROBE RAPPED

Keep BCR Line Open, Gov't Urged

Opposition, forest industry and municipal spokesmen urged the Socred government Wednesday to reject a recommendation to close the B.C. Railway's debt-ridden $190 million Fort Nelson extension.

The pleas came after the recommendation was made in an interim report by the royal commission examining the affairs of the BCR was tabled in the legislature.

The commission found that termination of the 400-kilometre line between Fort St. John and Fort Nelson, completed in 1971, would save taxpayers between $60 and $70 million during the next five years.

The report, submitted to the government Dec. 30, recommended that the extension be eliminated as soon as possible and no later than this spring when substantial repair work would be required.

It also urged financial aid be given the community of Fort Nelson to help soften the impact of the closure.

"It's a terrible recommendation," NDP leader Dave Barrett said.

"It is totally damaging to the rational development of the northeast sector of this province."

He said that Economic Development Minister Don Phillips, a BCR director, should make a public explanation why the government left the area with no word at all that the recommendations were as disastrous.

Phillips said the report will be presented to the BCR board of directors, and that the government would study the report.

He refused to say why the government had not tabled it until required to do so by law.

The minister said it is too late to shut down the extension this spring — because of short notice.

"It will remain running until some further decisions are made, and those further decisions will be made as soon as the report has further study."

Phillips said that the final decision will be made by the government, and refused further comment.

CRITICS, CRITICS CRITICS: W.A.C.

Members of the royal commission which criticized construction of the B.C. Railway's Fort Nelson extension are nothing but lawyers who never developed a country, former Socred premier W.A.C. Bennett said today.

"Critics, critics, critics," Bennett said today of the commissioners who said he made a mistake in embarking on the railway extension.

"That's the opinion of a few lawyers. They've never developed a country," said the former premier.

He said the same type of criticism was levelled at every project he undertook during his 20 years as premier.

Where would B.C. be today without the Peace and Columbia River developments? Bennett asked.

The report tabled in the legislature Wednesday says the Fort Nelson line will cost $60 million over the next five years and should be abandoned.

Bennett said the community is well worth an investment of $12 million a year.

"Northern development over a period of years would be one of the best investments the province would have."

Bennett said he fears the same fate is in store for the Dease Lake extension.

That extension should be completed as well, he said, and from then on negotiations should take place with Washington, D.C., and Ottawa to push the rail line right through to Alaska.

Bennett said the railway could be used to ship oil, adding that tankers sailing up and down the coast are dangerous enough in times of peace.

Worst Plunge In Months Puts Dollar Under 87¢

Times News Services

The Canadian dollar took its worst dive against its U.S. counterpart since last October on New York money markets Wednesday and continued the drop to 86.80 cents U.S. late today.

At the end of an active trading session Wednesday in the interbank wholesale market, the dollar was changing hands at 87.02 U.S. cents, down from the previous day's close of 87.44 U.S. cents.

At one point, heavy speculative and commercial selling of the dollar dragged the currency to 87 U.S. cents, but dealers hinted the Bank of Canada intervened to prevent any further decline.

The U.S. dollar made marginal gains against all major European currencies in early trading on foreign exchanges today.

The Canadian dollar hadn't lost as much ground against the U.S. in a single trading session since Oct. 24, 1977, when it plunged from 90.47 to 89.88 U.S. cents, a drop of 59 points.

Foreign exchange traders blamed the sharp drop on negative news coming out of Ottawa this week.

"The events of the last few days have only increased downward pressure on the dollar," said one trader.

A senior trader for the Royal Bank said the sharp drop of the dollar was not unusual because the currency has now fallen into "a new trading range."

But he noted there is no "panic" selling of the dollar similar to what was experienced last October. Instead, commercial demand for U.S. funds to cover payments for imports and other commitments is the major reason for the currency's decline, he said. "There're more buyers than sellers," he said.

Meanwhile, J.E. Toten, chief economist of the Bank of Montreal, told a seminar organized by the Conference Board in Canada here Wednesday that "Canada's international competitive position has been more or less restored as result of the devaluation which has occured."

Gov't Teaches Tips for Tips

VANCOUVER (CP) — Tourism British Columbia is sponsoring a class to teach restaurant workers how to make more money on tips.

Government and private industry spokesmen said they were worried about the impression restaurant and service-oriented workers in B.C. make on tourists after hearing rumors that B.C. workers were earning the reputation for poor and surly service.

As a result, Tourism B.C., a bureau of the tourism ministry, in conjunction with the Restaurant and Foodservices Association of B.C., decided it would hold classes to educate the workers.

Increasing your income is one of 12 courses offered in the 12-hour hospitality certificate course.

Others include: how to meet and make conversation with a stranger, techniques for remembering names and handling complaints and managing your time.

Don Bellamy, executive director of the restaurant association, said the service industry had to be made more aware of the impact personal service has on the tourism industry.

Explosive Gas Leak Mystery

ST. EUSTACHE, Que. (CP) — Provincial government technicians are searching for the source of a mysterious gasoline leak which has poured thousands of gallons of gas into the municipal sewer system, causing two explosions within 24 hours and forcing Wednesday's evacuation of a five-block section of town.

Early today, St. Eustache mayor Guy Belisle sent a formal demand to the Quebec departments of municipal affairs, environment and natural resources, asking for "financial and technical assistance."

Belisle said money was needed to pay for food and lodging for the approximately 300 people evacuated from their homes, for rebuilding of a sewage pumping station destroyed by one of the blasts, and for costs incurred by the hundreds of technicians on the scene.

Officials were at a loss to say how the gasoline has managed to leak into the sewer system over the last four months.

The explosion at the sewage station followed another blast Tuesday night in the basement of a private home while two men were using a welding torch to connect a new washing machine to the home's sewage system.

No one was hurt in that explosion, but the noise was heard for blocks and manhole covers along the street were blown eight feet into the air by the force of the blast.

A private company began flushing the sewer network late Wednesday, shortly after Quebec Environment Minister Marcel Leger granted "emergency" permission to dump the entire contents of the sewers into a nearby river.

In the last few weeks St. Eustache municipal workers have flushed almost 4,000 gallons of gasoline from the sewer network, but the normal spring thaw, accelerated by recent heavy rains, apparently spread the gasoline even further into the system.

Mayor Belisle said the smell of gasoline was noticed by merchants at a downtown shopping centre last Dec. 29. The Quebec government was immediately notified and workers began trying to find the leak.

Hair Too Short

WASHINGTON (WP) — Three U.S. Coast Guardsmen have been kicked off President Carter's honor guard because their superiors feel their hair looks too short.

The three were not allowed to take their usual places in the honor guard that welcomed president Nicolae Ceausescu of Romania Wednesday for fear "their white walls would stick out like a sore thumb" to quote the executive officer involved.

The three coast guardsmen were hauled before their skipper at the Alexandria, Va., Coast Guard station, who fined each of them $200 and busted them one rank, from seamen to seamen apprentice, for violating the rules against extreme haircuts.

Ottawa Rejects Que. Tax Plan

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Jean Chretien said today Quebec's proposals for selective reductions in its sales taxes are not acceptable to the federal government.

The federal government was prepared to subsidize Quebec two per cent a month for the items on which the province is removing its entire eight-per-cent sales tax.

But Quebec should reconsider its position, and make the sales tax reductions apply for all products as the other provinces have agreed to do, Chretien said.

If Quebec decides to reduce its sales tax on more items, then Ottawa will extend its subsidy payments for the other items, he added.

In Monday's budget, Chretien offered $226 million to Quebec for reducing its sales tax, about two-thirds of the total expected sales-tax loss. This payment likely will be smaller now, since the subsidy payment will only be on limited items and is held at two per cent, Chretien's Commons replies indicated.

Quebec Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau said he would remove the eight-per-cent sales tax entirely for clothing, textiles, shoes and furniture, but keep it on other items.

Winner Owes It To Louie

The big winner in the Times-CJVI Academy Awards contest, Tressie Johns, says she owes it all to "Louie the Greek" — and the luck of the draw.

Mrs. Johns, of 764 Mt. Joy, wins a weekend for two in Hollywood for correctly identifying the best actor, actress and motion picture.

Her name was drawn Wednesday from 74 correct submissions at the Capitol Theatre.

The happy winner said she took the advice of Louie, a local oddsmaker who has never made a wrong prediction when it comes to the Academy Awards. His selections were in a Times article preceding the April 3 ceremony.

Mrs. Johns correctly identified Richard Dreyfuss, Diane Keaton and the picture Annie Hall.

There were thousands of contestants but only 74 correct predictions.

Winners of the book Life Goes to the Movies were: Barb Downman, 3437 Diana; Lewis Gadsby of Langford; Carole Stafford, 3281 Linwood; Sharon Myers, 2241 Millstream, and Maureen Walford, 985 Ambassador.

PCs TAP DANSON

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative fund raisers have sent a membership card in PC Victory Club '78 to one of the country's leading Liberals, Defence Minister Barney Danson, and have asked for a $25 membership fee.

Danson says he isn't sending in his $25 just yet — he wants answers from PC president Robert Coates to a few questions first.

"I would like him to tell me who the leader is," Danson said to reporters. "He doesn't say in his letter, though he mentions Mr. Trudeau several times."

He noted that Coates said the Conservatives are "fighting to get Canada working again."

The Conservatives are better at fighting among themselves, he said.

The PC Victory Club sent out 600,000 letters to people across the country drawn from a variety of organizations, said David McMillan, a victory club official.

The lists were combed for Liberal cabinet ministers and MPs to avoid embarrassing incidents, McMillan said.

"Obviously, in the case of Danson, it wasn't done with a great deal of care."

AirWest Trying to 'Break Union'

An Airwest Airlines strike committee member claimed today the airline will go to any lengths to break the union, even refusing to abide by previously-signed agreements.

His charge came on the heels of company president Norm Gold's statement Wednesday that efforts to reach a contract settlement had come to an end.

Gold said AirWest will begin calling the 95 employees back to work and replace those who do not return.

He said the impasse came over agreeing on a back-to-work clause.

In an official statement Wednesday, Teamsters Union spokesman Wes Anderson said:

"We believe the inability of AirWest to abide by previously-signed commitments is indicative of the companies true attitude toward reaching a collective agreement with its employees."

The company and the Teamsters Union reached agreement two weeks ago on back-to-work arrangements as well as a list of some items to be included in a collective agreement.

Other outstanding contract items were to be resolved by arbitration.

Gold said the union was asked to accept a clause which would phase in jobs over a 30-day period and refused.

He said AirWest asked for an appropriate interim period but the union rejected that request.

However, the strike committee member said today Gold, during the latest round of talks, even backed off on items that had been previously agreed to in the signed contract.

The back-to-work phase-in proposal was not in the earlier package agreed to by both parties, he said.

He said Gold seems bent on sabotaging any agreement that is reached.

"His primary objective has been all along to break the union."

He said the union will step up picketing activity in an effort to make the dispute more public.

The pilots, mechanics and office workers have been on strike since Nov. 13.

LEGS NEARLY SEVERED, BOY WILL WALK AGAIN

BOSTON (UPI) — A 10-year-old boy whose legs were almost severed by the wheels of a freight train during a sledding accident will walk again, doctors at Boston Floating Hospital said Wednesday.

Dr. Max L. Ramenofsky, a pediatric surgeon, said Lee Stimson has regained feeling in both legs two months after the fourth grader skidded into the path of a moving freight train.

Dr. Ramenofsky said it was "extremely rare, if not unprecedented, for such injuries to be successfully repaired," but expressed optimism that therapy would restore the boy's use of his legs.

Lee was injured Feb. 14 near his home in South Boston while sledding with friends on a railroad embankment. When one of his companions freed him from beneath the train, Lee's legs were almost severed and his pelvis crushed.

Lee, the youngest child of Henry and Jean Stimson, received more than 20 pints of blood in the next 17 hours while a team of 35 doctors and nurses performed meticulous microsurgery.

Half of Lee's left foot was amputated seven days after initial surgery.

Doctors estimated Lee will be hospitalized "for at least another month" and that rehabilitation will continue for at least six months.

"He's a lttle depressed," Ramenofsky said of his young patient, "but he's improving rapidly, asking when he can go home because now he knows he can go home."

Police Smash Top Coke Ring

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police said Wednesday that one of Canada's major cocaine rings has been broken up, temporarily halting supply of the South American drug that is being used increasingly by the business community and night club set.

About 70 police officers began arrests of 16 Vancouver-area residents, some of them well-to-do businessmen, on charges stemming from the smuggling of at least 8½ kilograms of cocaine into Canada in the last two years.

They were scheduled to appear in court today charged with conspiracy to import cocaine into Canada and with conspiracy to traffic in cocaine.

RCMP Chief Superintendent Henry Jensen told a news conference the 8½-kilogram seizure of drugs — worth more than $4 million in Canada — was only a small part of drug shipments brought into Canada from Central and South America.

He refused to state the total amount of cocaine transported. The shipments were investigated for the last 18 months by police in Canada, the United States and various Central and South American countries.

Jensen said that in the last 18 months there has been a rising demand in British Columbia for cocaine, and current street prices range up to $100 a gram. Two deaths have been linked with cocaine use in B.C., he said.

Jensen said Vancouver is the primary distribution centre for cocaine destined for eastern Canadian and B.C. points.

He said the same pound of cocaine that sells for $5,000 in Bolivia will sell for $250,000 on the steets of Vancouver.

The 8½-kilogram shipment, which originated in Bolivia, was found at Vancouver International Airport last month. Montford Arthur Berney, 27, now being sought by police as part of the roundup, was charged with possession of cocaine for the purposes of trafficking in connection with that shipment.

Chief Supt. Tom Herdman of Vancouver city police said those charged include William Faulder Robertson, 50, of West Vancouver; Ido Paul Zamai, 45, Brian Robert Jefferies, 32, Frank Raymond Ferron, 42, Marwood Clifford Brown, 53, Allan Toyoshi Oda and Robert John McClellan, 35, all of Vancouver; Cyril Nathan Andrews, 52, of North Vancouver; Peter Allan Perry, 35, and William Thomas George Layman, 29, both of no fixed address.

Jensen said warrants also have also been issued for the arrest of Berney, for whom no address was given, Richard Henry Bengert, 38, and Steven Ponak, 48, both of Vancouver; Gary H. Aikens, 28, of Surrey; George William Garthwaite, 48, no address, and Oldrich Vaclavek, 57, of West Vancouver.

Pension Funds Rapped

OTTAWA (CP) — Billions of dollars of pension funds are being mismanaged and may fall far short of being able to meet the pension requirements of workers, a pension fund investment specialist said Wednesday.

John R. Ferguson, of JRF Financial Consultants Ltd., told an Ontario royal commission on pensions that too many fund managers buy and sell stocks at the wrong time trying to make short-term gains. He said they should be looking for long-term investments to finance pension benefits many years into the future.

"Because of the relatively poor quality of investment management, financial markets are not functioning in an efficient manner and this in turn is having a negative impact on the whole of the Canadian economy," he said in a brief to the commission.

Ferguson said most pension fund managers tend to buy stocks when prices are high because they think they are going higher. They tend to sell when prices are low because they think they are going lower.

He said the $30 billion now invested by private pension funds should be viewed as long-term investments since they won't have to be liquidated to pay benefits until well into the future.

Ferguson said too many investors try to outguess the market in an attempt to make short-term gains and inflate the apparent value of pension funds. Yet studies have shown it is impossible to outguess the market consistently.

"The reason for the inadequate management of pension fund assets is that there has not been developed as yet a sound measure of investment performance that has met with general acceptance," Ferguson said.

"The problem of placing sound values on the financial assets of pension funds has not yet been resolved."

Ferguson, a former investment specialist with the Bank of Canada, advocates a measure of pension assets based on "going concern values" which take into account expected future earnings.

In the case of mortgage and bond investments, these would be reasonably certain. In the case of stocks, there would be a projection based on expected performance of the company on which the stocks are based.

He said the confusion over value of assets is not a new problem and has been dealt with at other times in history.

Mayor Fails In Job Plea

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier said today that his latest attempt to salvage some summer jobs for students has met with union rejection, leaving him no alternative but to recommend that council withdraw its funding applications for the federal and youth employment programs.

Couvelier said he was denied permission to adress the executive of Local 374 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees Wednesday night, but he did submit a letter setting out a compromise proposal on wage rates.

The mayor's proposal envisaged reducing the number of jobs from the original total of 143 to 84.

Of those 84, 63 were to be parks playground leaders and supervisors, paid at the union-stipulated rate of $3.89 and $4.79 an hour.

But the remaining 21, hired at the same rates, would be employed on creek landscaping and clearance jobs.

The local apparently turned down the proposal, affirming its earlier position that all non-parks jobs be paid at the full union rate of $6.93 an hour.

Local president Larry Newman could not be reached for comment.

Earlier, however, he claimed 25 Saanich employees had been laid off in the last four months, and said the union insisted that all laid-off employees be considered first for any summer hiring programs.

A union source said today that another 18 employees are expected to be laid off within the next few days, but Couvelier dismissed this as "just a rumor . . . it's totally wrong."

He also said he had given the union a written assurance that employees already laid off would be recalled before any students were hired.

$12M Summer Job Plan

OTTAWA (CP) — Employment Minister Bud Cullen outlined plans Wednesday for a $12 million program called the summer job corps, which is expected to create close to 5,700 jobs, or 67,000 weeks of work, for young Canadians this summer.

The program, a component of the Canada Summer Youth Employment Program, will cover about 650 projects distributed among the provinces and territories.

Government departments or agencies will sign contracts with project leaders who will become employers.

Grants for the individual projects, to be implemented between April and Sept. 1, are restricted to a maximum of $50,000, Cullen said.

BATVAN ROADBLOCK NABS TWO

The attorney-general's BATvan stopped 1,263 cars in a six-hour roadblock manned by Colwood RCMP overnight Wednesday but caught only two impaired drivers.

The Breath Alcohol Testing equipment was operated from 9 p.m. to 3 a.m. in the Colwood area, mostly at Colwood Corner, police said.

Four 24-hour roadside suspensions were imposed; there was one liquor seizure, and numerous other motor vehicle offences including failure to wear seatbelt.

M.D. Says Accused Was Not Mentally Ill

VANCOUVER (CP) — A forensic psychiatrist testified in British Columbia Supreme Court Wednesday that the man charged with the slayings of four Fraser Valley teen-agers last summer at Rosedale, is not mentally ill and never has been:

Dr. John Duffy was one of two psychiatrists to testify Wednesday at the trial of Walter Murray Madsen, 24, of Chilliwack, charged with four counts of first-degree murder in the slayings.

Duffy told the court that a plan by Madsen to kidnap a wealthy Vancouver resident, which the accused had earlier confessed to, was an entirely logical solution to relieve his complaints of poverty.

Duffy said the kidnapping scheme, formed after reading a newspaper article on wealthy families while Madsen was in Grade 10, was logical and was not a grandiose fantasy.

A second psychiatrist, Dr. J.E. Joseph, testified that Madsen formulated each step of his kidnapping plan carefully, even though he knew it was morally and legally wrong.

Dr. Joseph said Madsen told him that once he had decided on the kidnap plan, he would have killed anyone who resisted while in the house of the person he chose.

Dr. Duffy testified that suicide discussions between Madsen and an undercover police officer in the accused's jail cell the day after his arrest were in keeping with Madsen's anxiety about what might happen to him. Duffy said it was important to distinguish between contemplation and action.

Madsen has pleaded not guilty of first-degree murder in the deaths of Evert den Hertog, 19, his brother Jan, 16, Bert Menger, 19, and Leola Guliker, 16.

The trial continues.

RCMP Began Probe

A senior offical in the attorney-general's ministry said Wednesday he was misunderstood when he said that it was the ministry and not the RCMP which initiated an investigation into Jack Davis.

"I regret that the misunderstanding has taken place, but clearly the facts are that the investigation by the RCMP took place on the basis of information given to them by a private citizen," associate deputy attorney-general Neil McDiarmid told a news conference.

Earlier McDiarmid was quoted as saying that contrary to statements by Premier Bill Bennett and Gardom, the RCMP did not initiate an investigation into the use of airline tickets by the minister — who was asked to resign his transport, energy and communications post by Bennett following the investigation.

Bennett and Gardom said last week that the RCMP launched the investigation in mid-January.

Davis admitted in the legislature last Thursday that he pocketed the difference between government-purchased first class tickets and regular tickets, using it to offset other expenses.

Russian Wants Cash

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Arkady Shevchenko, the Soviet government's renegade at the United Nations, is reported demanding money and U.S. protection to get Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim off the Russian hook.

UN spokesman Francois Giuliani said the top Russian UN employee wants "a mixed bag of money and personal security" to resign from his $76,000-a-year job.

When that happens, Waldehim told reporters in Vienna, "this will become an affair between the Soviet and U.S. governments."

Some diplomats expressed concern that the affair would foul the atmosphere for U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance's talks in Moscow next week on nuclear arms reductions.

Informed sources said Shevchenko wants the money he has paid toward the UN pension for which he is not yet eligible, a lump sum for the two remaining years of his contract and assurances he can remain in the United States.

In Washington, U.S. state department spokesman Tom Reston said Shevchenko "is free to stay here, return to the U.S.S.R., or go to another country as far as we are concerned."

The 47-year-old Ukrainian was scheduled to return to Moscow on leave this week but instead left his job as undersecretary-general for political and Security Council affairs April 5 because of "differences with his government," a spokesman for Waldheim announced Monday. He has not been seen in public since.

Shevchenko's lawyer, Ernest Gross, says the missing man is in seclusion near New York but is not a defector. Gross said Shevchenko intends to remain a Soviet citizen.

Although Shevchenko's post is reserved for a Soviet citizen nominated by the Soviet government, Gross contended that the UN Charter prohibits Waldheim from firing him at the demand of the Russians. But a well-placed source said the Soviet mission asked Waldheim to get Shevchenko's resignation, and the secretary-general told Soviet Ambassador Oleg Troyanovsky he will do his best to get it.

Culture Fest Proposed

A brief urging that Victoria host an international cultural festival has been sent to Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf.

The brief was prepared by McPherson Playhouse Foundation president Allan Purdy.

The cultural festival cum technological exposition would involve a series of Pacific Rim nations.

The brief proposes that a program be initiated immediately.

The month of May 1979 is proposed as a target date for plenary planning sessions involving representatives from the cultural, technological and scientific communities of the Pacific Rim countries.

Dealing with scope, countries mentioned include the United States from Alaska to Hawaii, Mexico, certain South American countries, Polynesia, Indonesia, Korea, Japan, mainland China, Taiwan, Australia and New Zealand, with the possibility of adding others as planning progresses.

Visiting displays and performances from these countries would be coupled with matching and complimentary exhibitions, performances and workshops by Victoria area organizations including UVic, Pearson College, the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, among others.

The brief also suggests a development grant in the amount of $150,000 be made by the provincial government to initiate the entire program.

The McPherson Foundation, it states, would be prepared to establish the necessary administrative organization capable of developing the proposal as outlined.

Controls to Save the Dollar

Down, down, down it goes and where it will stop, nobody knows. The Canadian dollar, which less than a year ago soared so proudly above its U.S. counterpart, now cowers far below it.

Federal financial experts say that a cheap dollar is good for Canada. It reduces the cost of our exports and therefore makes them more attractive to foreign buyers. Tourists will flock here from abroad to enjoy a substantial discount on their currency, an influx which Victoria has already noted although the year is young.

But how cheap is cheap? Jack Horner, federal minister of industry, trade and commerce, thinks that a 90-cent Canadian dollar is about right. When will it get back to that level?

Prime Minister Trudeau and Finance Minister Jean Chretien have never said where they think the Canadian dollar should be vis-a-vis other currencies but they can be presumed to accept Horner's 90 cents U.S. The problem is how to get it back up there and keep it there.

They have tried. Although their official policy was to let the dollar float until it stabilized at some unspecified level, they were quick to intervene when it became evident that 90 cents was not a firm floor.

Canada's U.S. dollar reserves were raided to prop our sinking currency. They fell from $2.3 billion at the beginning of the year to $921 million at the end of March. That was too low for safety and they had to be pumped up again. No problem. American bankers like the perpetual motion of debt servicing and readily lent us $750 million to restore the reserves. They will oblige when we go back for more.

The one thing the friendly bankers will not do as yet is display any confidence in the Canadian dollar. Half-hearted efforts to attract foreign investors by raising domestic interest rates have been unsuccessful. Monday's budget did not impress. Apart from our dismal trade showing there are too many uncertainties in Canada today.

While the bankers turn a cold shoulder to our currency, Canadian citizens show what they think of their own dollar. The big shots invest in U.S. or European real estate and securities, the little guys hurry off to foreign vacations as if they hadn't a care in the world. All of them drain those precious reserves still further.

No one likes controls and Chretien has scorned suggestions that he impose them on foreign exchange to stem the outflow, but that is exactly what he should be doing until our trade balance is right again. He should also study the possible application of import controls. Canadian dollars should be kept at home.

Will Chretien take such action? Not with an election in the offing. Oh yes, if you are planning a vacation outside Canada, enjoy yourself.

Endangered Art

Leonardo Da Vinci's painting of the Mona Lisa hangs behind thick glass in Paris, a guard of the Louvre staff always close. He watches the crowds of tourists for any untoward movement. They are kept back from the painting, which is quite small and difficult to admire except up very close. The special protection for La Giaconda makes it even more difficult to appreciate Da Vinci's mastery.

In Rome, Michaelangelo's most famous sculpture stands in dim light in St. Peter's behind an electronic barrier that warns of even a hand or arm that crosses it. The Pieta is several yards removed from the worshipful visitors and pilgrims who come to gaze upon its lifelike translucence. No longer may the reverent approach closely to this moving representation of the crucified Christ and His mother.

These precautions are necessary to preserve the world's priceless art because it is no longer safe hanging on museum walls under the watchful eyes of guards and staff.

In the 1970s there have appeared the deranged saboteurs of irreplaceable paintings and sculpture, who do not recognize the traditional respect and reverence of centuries.

The Pieta is protected now by electronic means because one day in 1972 an unbalanced individual attacked it with a hammer, breaking off the madonna's arm and some of the fingers and denting the marble surface of the piece. It has been repaired so well that the eye detects nothing, but it is not the same.

A seventeenth century Poussin in the National Gallery in London was slashed by a young man. In Holland, two days later a valued and beautiful Van Gogh portrait was sliced with a knife and badly damaged as it hung on the wall at the Stedelijk museum. It is near the Rijksmuseum where many famous Dutch masters of the seventeenth century hang, where too Rembrandt's incomparable Night Watch was attacked in 1975 by another lunatic armed with a serrated bread knife.

The Dutch turned the misfortune into a serendipituous exhibition: a section of the Night Watch gallery was hermetically sealed behind glass and technicians and restorers worked behind floor to ceiling windows. The public watched in fascination for more than a year.

It has been restored and cleaned and given a new canvas backing. Segments that were slashed have been invisibly reattached thread by thread with beeswax.

But how long until someone again attacks it, or another painting? Must the world's museums now be guarded more closely than our airports and politicians? These mindless, senseless attacks are inexplicable. Why would anyone seek to destroy such beauty?

Ripoff of a Different Kind

OTTAWA — Unemployment insurance, as everyone knows and as most complain about, costs us a great deal. Few, though, realize fully the scale of the cost. At $4.3 billion last year, unemployment insurance benefits amounted to one-tenth the entire federal budget, and to one-third of spending on all social security program combined.

Until recently, an even less well-known aspect of unemployment insurance was that it benefits the well-off, proportionately, more than the poor. According to an Economic Council of Canada staff study the top one-fifth of families, with average incomes of $30,000, draw 22.3 per cent of unemployment insurance benefits, while the poorest one-fifth, with average incomes of $2,700 collect only 8.1 per cent.

The combination of exorbitant costs and of inequitable benefits has provoked a minor crisis of conscience in Ottawa. "The question (of equity) comes up all over the place," said Employment Minister Bud Cullen last week. It couldn't be "dismissed out of hand". Therefore, said Cullen, he would study the possibility of limiting payments to the well-off.

Least and Most

From this tentative, half-step forwards, Cullen promptly took three steps backwards. To disqualify the well-off, said Cullen, would be to "cut off our nose to spite our face" because these individuals contribute disproportionately to the fund.

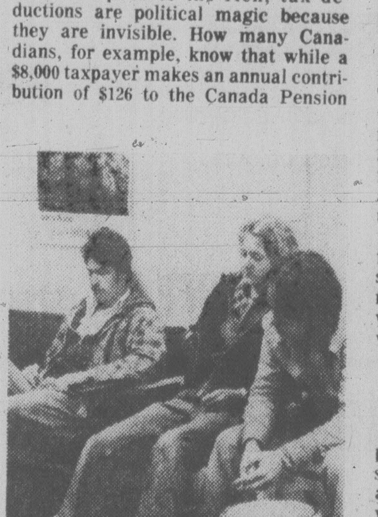
Tripe. Either Cullen doesn't know what he is talking about, or he does, and is faking it. The well-off, in fact, both collect the largest unemployment insurance benefits and make the smallest net contributions. The explanation for this disparity, set out in a just-published report by the National Council of Welfare, is that unemployment insurance payments are tax-deductible and so, are more valuable as tax-shelters for those with high incomes.

The following welfare council figures apply to taxpayers with a spouse and two dependent children:

The scheme is symmetrical. A $8,000 taxpayer pays the most ($120 a year) and gets the least ($103 a week). A $50,000 taxpayer pays the least ($90) and gets the most ($160).

Ah, yes, you may argue, but few $50,000 taxpayers ever are unemployed. True. Their spouses and children, though, regularly are. Almost one-half (45 per cent) of all unemployment insurance benefits are paid to claimants who are not heads of families. This proportion rises as family income increases.

As a device to redistribute income from the poor to the rich, tax deductions are political magic because they are invisible. How many Canadians, for example, know that while a $8,000 taxpayer makes an annual contribution of $126 to the Canada Pension Plan and is thereby entitled to a pension worth 77 per cent of the maximum, a $25,000 taxpayer makes a net, or post-tax, contribution of only $101, yet is entitled to a full 100 per cent pension? How many know that basic tax deductions, worth an average of $4,000 to a $50,000 taxpayer but of only $500 to anyone earning less than $10,000, amounted in 1975 to $6.4 billion, or to half the cost of all our social security programs, unemployment insurance included?



WAITING FOR WORK
. . . rich pay less, get more

These hidden, reverse, subsidies, from poor to rich, are the reason why the popular myth that the more you earn the more taxes you have is just that, a myth. In 1975, according to the welfare council report, the botton one-fifth of families earned four per cent of the nation's pre-tax income; post-tax, its share rose to just 4.6 per cent. By contrast, the top one-fifth of families earned 42.6 per cent of the total pre-tax income and clung to 40.6 per cent of post-tax income.

(These statistics accept at face value the declared incomes of the well-off. They make no allowance for the fact that those with high incomes are far more likely to record capital gains than are those with low incomes. Nor for the fact that the poor pay, proportionately, a larger share of their incomes in sales taxes than do the well-off.)

The facts are unarguable. So, therefore, are the conclusions. The real reason Cullen doesn't want to "cut off our nose to spite our face" is that he doesn't want to cut off voters. The well-to-do vote; many of the poor do not.

Talking Tripe

Mind you, the fact that today's unemployment insurance program is designed to make certain that them as has already gits more isn't the real reason why a family income means test and elimination of tax deductibility are essential. Instead, it is that unless these reforms are implemented, then them as now gits little, will tomorrow git even less.

Unemployment insurance payments this year — because of higher benefits and lifting of the rule that claimants must be actively seeking work — will billow up to $5 billion. At some point, Ottawa will panic. Post-election, a gesture of restraint is inevitable. Just as inevitably, this restraint will fall most heavily upon low income workers, as happened in the 1977 "reforms" which extended the qualifying period from eight to up to as much as 14 weeks.

So far, Cullen's twinge of conscience has provoked him, knowingly or unwittingly, into talking tripe. Maybe, just maybe, a reading of the welfare council's report would provoke Cullen into silence. That at least, for the sake of his own and of everyone else's understanding of the real character of our unemployment insurance program, would be a genuine half step forwards.

Royal Oak Mess

I have been a Royal Oak ratepayer and a resident for over 25 years. I am the owner of one of the 44 parcels of land within the boundaries of the proposed Royal Oak industrial park. I am also one of a hundred or so ratepayers who either own land or live within its boundaries who have been held up and inconvenienced for years and, with the recent decision of our mayor and four members of council, still find ourselves in a very frustrating situation.

In the early 1960s we inquired about building a house on our second lot. We were informed at that time that this area was being proposed for an industrial zone and were discouraged from building. Since that time we have watched the industries move in. We now have Playland, Simpsons-Sears, the post office and Fun City and also B.C. Hydro, Eaton's and the public works department in this area, which almost convinces one that this is a small industrial park now.

On March 22 of this year, a public hearing was held on the rezoning of this industrial park. This meeting was chaired by our mayor, and there are certain questions which I feel should be brought to the attention of the public.

Why were letters, sent to the municipal clerk for reading at the hearing, never read? Why was it never revealed that there were names of firms submitted to Saanich who were willing to locate in that area? Why did a council member who should have been judging with an open mind, read a previously prepared speech when casting his vote?

Why did one alderman base his decision on the fact that two previous councils neglected to pass this rezoning bylaw? Is he so ill-informed and unacquainted with this rezoning that he did not know the length of time that this project was in the planning stages? The number of years that it was held up in the previous government's land freeze? The length of time it took to get it released from the Capital Region Board? The length of time it was held up by the highways department and also the long wait for the sewers?

This same council member voiced his opinion on a petition which was presented at the hearing and therefore as it was presented at the hearing, could not have been checked for its validity. Have you ever thought about the hundreds of thousands of your tax dollars that have been spent on this project since it was first proposed some 15 or more years ago, and how many more hundreds of thousands of your tax dollars will be spent if all this has to be repeated for an alternate site?

How high would our taxes have to rise to offset this great waste? Is there not cause for concern? Does it not leave some doubt in our minds as to the qualifications of some of our elected representatives? How deflated our planners must feel to see their years of skilled work defeated by some unskilled representatives.

I believe the time has come for us to stop and think, and to do something about it. — W. C. Hubbard, 4259 Glanford Avenue.

Right On

May I congratulate you on presenting the Write On! course in co-operation with the University of Victoria's Department of English.

In my case, it filled a particular need. Being a newcomer to the Island, I lost my opportunity to enrol in the university's creative writing course, as all the places were filled very quickly. However, thanks to Write On!, I feel my loss has now become my gain. During the past 10 weeks I have benefitted enormously from the lessons.

When the time comes for me to enter the classroom, I shall have a much better understanding of the principles of clear effective writing. — Mrs. J. S. Scott, 576 Leaside Avenue.

Cut up all the logs for firewood and clear the beaches for people.

On the Beaches

A recent visit to Victoria area beaches (Gonzales, Willows, Saanichton, etc.) revealed all of them clogged by hundreds of logs, most of them ugly and in some cases taking more room on the beach than the leftover beach area.

To get rid of them is a costly project; to permit people to chainsaw them causes unbearable noise. May I propose an easy solution?

Before the summer or milder weather causes people to flock to these beaches, couldn't the parks department, on cloudy days or weekdays, saw most of them in 1½-foot lengths as a one-time project and then simply leave them there?

People could use a sledgehammer and wedges to chop them and bring the wood home. If the use of wedges is publicized, say with a sign, people would soon find out how easy it is, that even a woman can chop a log with ease. — Gaston E. Godbout, Dogwood Manor, 1124 Fairfield Road.

Impaired on Grass?

In the case of Ian David Brenton, reported in the Times of April 7 ('Two-Toke' Driver Pays Fine of $450), the only evidence as to impairment of his driving ability, brought against him by Const. Backus, appears to be that he obeyed the officer's request with alacrity, walked with a bounce and was good-humored. If these are considered criminal impairment then 'tis a sorry day for mankind. I would point out to both Judge Allan and Const. Backus that "there is no available evidence that cannabis has been a significant factor in traffic accidents" (Interim Report of the Canadian Government Commission of Inquiry into the Non-Medical Use of Drugs, Chapter 2, Section 162).

Much money and effort spent by scientists, politicians and the medical profession has failed to discover any correlation between the use of marijuana and driving impairment and yet Const. Backus claims to be able to recognize such impairment by simple roadside procedures designed, presumably, to test drunken impairment.

I applaud Mr. McElmoyle's questioning of the use of the word "drug." The word is practically meaningless anyway, as it can include anything that is ingested, inhaled or injected. Marijuana is not a dangerous or narcotic drug, it is totally benign, a mild psychedelic and an aid of enlightenment. — L. Denise Dunn, 1144 Fort Street.

Recreation

As parents of a handicapped child, we would like to express our most sincere thanks to the staff and volunteers of the Association for the Recreation of the Handicapped. The programs they initiated and provided the last 2½ years were outstanding and filled a real need.

Our daughter thoroughly enjoyed them, and already the week seems long without her program to look forward to. We hope that the termination will be temporary and the municipalities will establish programs for all handicapped persons. — Mr. and Mrs. W. van Leusden, 1706 Kisber Avenue.

Belmont Blood

In your article concerning the Red Cross blood donor clinic competition between 10 Victoria high schools (Times, April 5) you failed to mention that Belmont secondary received the trophy last year for attracting the most donors, 254 pints in total.

As defending champions of this trophy we feel slighted that you didn't use students from our school to publicize this competition in the picture.

We want you to know that we are trying our utmost to keep possession of the trophy for another year. — Kathleen Buchanan, Belmont Secondary School, 3067 Jacklin Road.

Cook's Spoons

I have recently had friends visiting with me from Alberta. As a memento of their visit, and as they are collectors of spoons, they were interested in buying one to commemorate the Captain Cook bicentennial. On a visit to the provincial museum a spoon was purchased, but on closer inspection it was discovered that the date was 1878-1978. The spoon was returned for a refund.

We tried several other places in town and all stores visited had for sale bicentennial spoons dated 1878-1978, and all seemed totally unconcerned when we drew this fact to their attention. My friends were lucky to notice this error before returning to Alberta, but what of the people who may not notice this error until they return home, maybe a great distance away? I suppose this is a real case of "caveat emptor", but very poor for Victoria's image as a tourist City, and promoter of Captain Cook's bicentennial 1778-1978. — Pauline Dakin, 20-4051 Shelbourne Street.

Noise Pollution 'Most Neglected Environmental Issue'

MARGOT HORNBLOWER
Washington Post

A recent study of the psychological effects of noise found that, while a lawn mower was running nearby, people were less likely to help a passerby with a broken arm pick up a load of dropped books.

Research in the U.S., in England and in Japan has revealed that birth defects, high blood pressure and admissions to mental hospitals are higher among people who live around airports.

In a school next to an elevated railway, students whose classrooms faced the track did significantly worse on reading tests than their peers, a study found.

A number of studies like this were cited by the Environmental Protection Agency in testimony to Congress last week as evidence that noise is not just an annoyance and an occasional threat to hearing, but a serious general health problem whose full effects are still not understood.

Despite the evidence, however, the U.S. federal government's noise control program is seriously underfunded and hampered by bureaucratic infighting, according to witnesses at the Senate Environment Committee hearings.

About 16 million people have impaired hearing in the U.S. because of noise and 13 million are exposed to health-endangering noise levels from cars, buses, trucks, airplanes, and construction equipment, according to the General Accounting Office, Congress' investigative agency.

Yet, "implementation of a unified, national effort to control noise has been slow and, in some cases, ineffective," Henry Eschwege, GAO's noise expert, testified.

Little progress has occurred in reducing aircraft noise — a particular problem in urban areas across the country — because of the "adversary relationship" between EPA, which recommends regulations, and the Federal Aviation Administration, which has final authority, Eschwege said. EPA assistant administrator David G. Hawkins said, "EPA has been totally frustrated." Despite 11 EPA proposals, the aviation agency "has chosen not to press the aircraft manufacturers," Hawkins said.

EPA wants new airplanes to incorporate the quietest noise equipment available but FAA says such stringent standards are not practical or economically feasible.

"There is a growing evidence of a link between noise and the development of high blood pressure and other heart and circulatory problems," Hawkins said. "A recent study found that children living and going to grade school under aircraft flight paths had higher blood pressure levels than children in a quieter community."

Studies in Japan, England and most recently in Los Angeles have also linked noise and birth defects. Around the Los Angeles airport, researchers found a rate of 1,190 abnormal births per 100,000 compared to 868 in other parts of the country.

Noise-produced stress affects family and work relationships and makes people generally antisocial.

Noise also interferes with children's learning, Hawkins said. In Inglewood, Calif., aircraft noise interfered so much with learning that new schools had to be built.

Despite such evidence, noise is "one of the most neglected of environmental issues," Hawkins said.

The Branch Plant Nation

TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

BLAKENEY . . . sets out the problem

We need more Allan Blakeneys in Canada. In straightforward words the Saskatchewan premier has laid out the basic issue that will determine what kind of a future, if any, we can look forward to as a country.

Blakeney's message, delivered at the recent Canada West Foundation's conference on national unity in Banff, is that because of the high foreign domination of our economic and cultural life Canada is on a dead end road. This should be the underlying issue in the next election.

Our policies of encouraging more foreign investment and lack of resolve to strengthen Canadian culture are slowly but surely destroying the Canadian dream of an independent nation with its own identity, values and achievements.

So the question voters should be asking is which parties, which candidates are prepared to support policies to boost Canadian ownership and cultural life?

For we can't keep the country united, develop a clear sense of identity, solve our economic problems and create our own just society unless we are something more than a branch plant version of the United States.

It will be hard to make this the basic issue. For as Blakeney pointed out, most of our political leaders "are racing to extol the virtues of foreign control over the Canadian economy." This is true of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and his cabinet and of Opposition Leader Joe Clark and many of his senior MPs. It's true, as well, of Premier William Davis and Treasurer Darcy McKeough of Ontario, for that matter.

Nonetheless, there are compelling reasons why Canadians concerned about foreign domination of our economic and cultural life — Canadians who care about their country's future — have to push the issue hard in this next election.

National unity is one reason. Quebecers won't want to stay in Canada if Canadians themselves are unwilling to develop their own identity and be masters in their own house. If we have nothing better than a branch plant society, Quebecers would be better off dealing with the head office south of the border.

In a sense the election of the Parti Quebecois in Quebec is a clear sign that Quebecers are fed up with the drift of the rest of the country. When they look at Toronto they feel they could be looking at Chicago, Atlanta or Minneapolis. Can we show that we are different, that we have goals and values and a desire to build our own country, one that Quebecers will want to share?

Canada on 'dead end road'
Unless policies are changed

A second reason foreign domination should be the principal election issue is economic. Canadians cannot solve their fundamental economic problems as long as so much of the economy is controlled in foreign head offices.

This is becoming clear in the search for a Canadian industrial strategy. With roughly 60 per cent of our manufacturing industry foreign-controlled — and a much higher percentage of such key industries as computers, petrochemicals, electrical products, machinery and automobiles — we've ended up with a fragmented branch plant economy.

Foreign head offices determine what investments will be made, what new jobs will be created, what markets will be developed, what products will be made.

Because we have so many branch plants our manufacturing industry has few technologies of its own, does little research and development, relies on foreign parent companies for engineering, design, marketing, corporate planning and other crucial decisions. The best jobs in industry after industry are held outside of Canada.

Unless we can develop Canadian-controlled industries to compete in world markets, our manufacturing may be doomed, leading to economic mediocrity.

There's a third reason for making foreign domination the key election issue. It's that Canadians want to live their own dream. We are different from our neighbors — not better, but different. We can make our own contribution to the world, develop our own sense of social justice, aspire to our own ideals as people, make our own history.

But we can't do that if we are someone else's cultural and economic colony.

That's Blakeney's vital message. Let's make sure our political parties and their candidates hear it during the next election campaign. They have to if we're going to save Canada.

Iran's 'Miracle' Turns Sour

By JONATHAN C. RANDAL

TEHRAN — Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi is beset by grave economic, social and political problems he set in motion when he spearheaded the successful oil producers' fight to quadruple prices in 1973.

Rarely has modern history appeared to provide such an example of a people's ingratitude toward a leader who has brought about an economic miracle of similar proportions.

The emerging middle class he fostered is following the pattern long established by the upper crust in placing its money abroad in Western Europe and the United States when it is not itself emigrating.

At the bottom of the social ladder enough social discontent exists to allow the shah's old adversaries — Shiite Moslem leaders opposed to his secular devotion to modernization — to start riots that have damaged Iran's image abroad.

If, after 37 years in power, the autocratic shah finds himself in such hazardous circumstances he has no one but himself to blame, in the view of many friends and critics alike, for his troubles stem from his disastrous decision to inject the lion's share of the new oil money directly into the already badly strained Iranian economy.

He personally ordered the fifth development plan's funds doubled to nearly $70 billion. He ignored suggestions that ports, roads and other infrastructure should be built first or that the huge oil profits be invested massively in the West, as was done by other Middle East producers.

Instead the shah marshalled the wealth of the second-biggest oil exporter — after Saudi Arabia — to bulldoze his way overnight into mass industrialization.

Government commissions set up to investigate the ensuing fiasco pinpointed factors ranging from delays and cost overruns, poor management and worse supervision to questionable foreign contractor performances and shortages of materials and manpower.

Economists acknowledge privately that most of the money of the fifth plan, which ended last year, was wasted. Iran is still trying to dig out from the debris and to a great degree the success of that effort will determine the stability of the regime and history's judgment of the 58-year-old monarch.

So far the eight-month-old government of Premier Jamshid Amouzegar has done little to introduce the forceful, rational choices it was supposed to formulate.

The shah has already paid the price for insisting on personal control of a country whose complexity clearly called for a delegation of power and decision-making.

In a recent interview, he insisted that Iran would push ahead as scheduled with its most economically questionable projects: massive petrochemical complexes and 23,900 megawatts of nuclear power by 1994. Taken together they symbolize the shah's increasingly elusive goal of finding alternative sources of foreign exchange earnings by the time oil revenues start falling in 15 to 20 years. But the detailed problems involved constitute a primer of Third World economic horror stories.

PAHLAVI
. . . in a mess

A spoiled and largely unskilled work force grown accustomed to annual wage increases ranging between 25 and 50 per cent has little notion of discipline. Productivity is low — and slipping. The government is delighted that inflation has been reduced to a current annual rate of 24 per cent.

Capital costs for new plants range from two to three times as much as they do for similar projects in Western Europe or the U.S. A dearth of foremen and middle-level executives means quality is shoddy. Good vocational schools are the exception, as are good teachers. The concept of maintenance is little known. Housing, water, roads, communications, and electric power are in short — or erratic — supply.

Brownouts and blackouts last summer substantially reduced industrial production. Food imports cost about $2 billion a year because peasant farmers are being drawn to the cities. There is glaring inequity in the distribution of income.

Economists say there is little the shah can do. "He's locked into big projects and it's hard to change," an economist said. "He's in a box for the next three to four years."

Bad Days in the Piazza

russell baker

The news that Italy's notorious Red Brigades have kidnapped the Colosseum in a daring and exquisitely executed daylight raid has once again raised serious doubts about the Italian government's ability to maintain order.

This, of course, is precisely what the terrorists hoped to achieve when they announced they were holding the Colosseum in a secret people's prison. The government compounded its troubles with a foolhardy attempt at deception when it permitted the Minister of Roman Antiquities to announce that the Colosseum was not, in fact, missing but had merely been sent out for drycleaning.

This bluff was exposed the following day when Italian newspapers received Polaroid snapshots of the Colosseum looking haggard and nervous and cowering under the automatic weapons of two terrorists. Public confidence has been further eroded by police failure to find the kidnapped arena despite official insistence that it is being held somewhere in the precincts of Rome.

There is still no clear indication what the terrorists propose to do with the Colosseum. As the operators of Radio City Music Hall discovered in New York, except for the occasional rock concert, large theatres are devilishly expensive to sustain. This has given rise to speculation that the Red Brigades may plan to tear down the Colosseum and replace it with a parking lot.

This seems improbable. The Red Brigades already have more parking space than they need, having kidnapped the Roman Forum last month to get storage space for the vast fleet of automobiles necessary for their daring and exquisitely executed raids.

There is little doubt that these ruthless pioneers of the new order are deeply sensitive to the importance of proper maintenance of their cars. The kidnapping of the Baths of Caracalla, which they subsequently turned into a car-wash, proves that. Most terrorist observers, however, believe they have other plans for the Colosseum.

The fear, of course, is that they intend to use it as a people's arena. This suspicion has led the government to post large detachments of police around all Italian zoos containing lions. The government is determined not to suffer the ultimate humiliation of having kidnapped lions thrown to the people in the Colosseum.

Such countermeasures merely amuse the Red Brigades. They realize that a police force absorbed in guarding lions and searching for Colosseums leaves a thousand other potential targets unguarded. With their daring and exquisite execution, there is nothing to stop them from suddenly shooting Augustus' Tomb or, without warning, pouring rancid olive oil on all the fettucine in the Via Veneto.

What can the Italian government do to stabilize this volatile situation? One approach starts from the assumption that the terrorists, though they may behave unkindly, are at heart idealists struggling for a world in which society, politics and people will be pure, noble and harmonious; where wealth will be fairly distributed and no man will ever again swindle another, no matter how gullible he be.

Persons favoring this theory argue that since there is no way any government can fulfill the terrorists' desires, there is no alternative short of trying to club some sense into them before they shoot or kidnap everything in Italy for the good of humanity.

The less violent approach rests on the assumption that, idealists or not, the terrorists are just as incompetent as everybody else, including even the government. People who take this line argue for non-violent passivity.

Let them keep the Colosseum, the Forum, the Baths of Caracalla, these people say. Send the police home and let them kidnap the Parliament, the staff of the Excelsior Hotel, the Pope and the College of Cardinals, and even Gore Vidal.

With all of Italy in custody, the Red Brigades will be the government, which should quickly provide them a good education in the impracticalities of idealism as a guiding principle for running a not-very-rich, not-very-strong country that hates tax collectors.

The theory is that the experience will age them very rapidly and make them easy to kidnap, but the danger is that it can also be a painfully long cure. It took more than 20 years to cure Mussolini.

FLOODS UNLIKELY IN B.C.

The environment ministry said Wednesday B.C. rivers probably won't flood this year.

The ministry said in its monthly snow survey bulletin that if weather conditions follow normal patterns, peak flows throughout the province will not be greater than average this year.

"The forecasts call for well below average run-off in the Upper Fraser, Peace, Skeena and coastal regions," the survey said.

"Other regions of the province can expect below averge runoff with the exception of the Okanagan and Similkameen which should have close to average runoff."

The bulletin said the mild weather conditions of March have produced a snowpack accumulation well below normal since February.

"Record or near-record low snowpacks are reported in the Upper Fraser, Peace, Skeena and south coast regions," the ministry said.

Wiring Blamed For Fire

Faulty wiring is blamed for a fire that caused $1,500 damage to a 1969 model car at 1057 Bank Tuesday afternoon.

Owner A.R. Woodske, 1776 Howroyd, told city firemen the car, which had a a new engine and other improvements, was worth twice that much.

Another car fire Tuesday evening destroyed an older-model car owned by Brent Racette, 975 Fairfield.

Firemen said an eight-year-old was turned over to juvenile authorities after setting the blaze in the upholstery.

Victims Fight for Remains From Estate Sales Fraud

B.C. Supreme Court will hear competing claims for household property seized by Saanich police during their investigation a year ago of a pyramid sales scheme which involved cut-price goods from phoney estate sales.

At least 17 creditors from Victoria, Duncan and Vancouver and the STRY Credit Union are seeking to divide a quantity of household effects taken by police from 921 Leslie Drive, the home of Harry and Sheila Anderson.

They are the parents of Lauren Gail Phillips, 31, sentenced last January to two years less one day in jail after being convicted in county court of 17 counts of fraud involving $50,340. The prosecution said the pyramid sales scheme involved non-existent estate sales in which cars, furniture, boats and aircraft were available for one-tenth of their normal price. Some people got goods but many did not.

The creditors have default judgments against Phillips for more than $60,000.

Ten lawyers appeared before Mr. Justice J.G. Ruttan in Supreme Court chambers Wednesday. He adjourned the main issue to fix a trial date and it was informally agreed that one or two of the lawyers will represent the judgment creditors in a class action to reduce costs. Leo Kuta of Duncan is expected to present the case for the judgment creditors.

The first move to be heard by Ruttan was by the Sheriff of Vancouver Island, William Lee, who asked that $6,000 withdrawn by Phillips from her account at the STRY Credit Union and later turned over to Saanich police be paid out of Supreme Court to the sheriff.

Douglas Gray, counsel for the sheriff, said "there are a number of creditors who all hope to get something."

STRY Credit Union got a garnishing order into Saanich just ahead of the sheriff taking control of the household effects seized by police. He said the credit union money was not capable of being garnisheed and the cash should be in the same position as the household effects.

The credit union argued that after Phillips withdrew the $6,000, cheques came in and there was a $6,200 overdraft and that the $6,000 was not seized by police but simply held by them after Phillips gave it to them until the investigation was completed.

Ruttan said he was satisfied the money was taken by police and held by them and is not subject to being garnisheed. He ordered the cash to be returned to the sheriff.

Gray said the sheriff takes no position on the claims of the Andersons and the judgment creditors.

The Andersons, in documents filed in Supreme Court, claim possession of the articles seized by police a year ago from their house, where Phillips also lived. They say a variety of items, including a mini-bike, living room suite, bedroom suite, three television sets, washer, dryer, video tape camera, rings and other items, were purchased by them from their daughter for $4,760.

Sgt. Anthony Clark, one of the Saanich policeman who investigated the fraud, said in a document filed at the courthouse that police took goods which Phillips indicated belonged to her and which she purchased with other people's money "and I believe the goods belong" to Phillips.

Ruttan ruled that the Andersons will be named as the claimants and the judgment creditors as the respondents in the trial over ownership of the goods held by the sheriff.

Bruce McConnan, counsel for the Andersons, said they and Phillips are not seeking the $6,000.

The judgment creditors are claiming the household effects and the $6,000.

Driver Convicted

A 29-year-old Langford man was convicted in county court Wednesday of criminal negligence causing the death Jan. 6, 1977, of Jeffrey Bruce Jacques, 41, of Colwood in a car-truck collision in the 300-block Old Island Highway.

Michael Gene Fraik, driver of the pickup truck, will be sentenced by Judge E.J.C. Stewart May 8 after a presentence report is prepared.

Stewart, in convicting Fraik at the end of a three-day trial, said it was a tragic case in which Jacques was killed instantly and his wife, a passenger beside him, was injured.

He said Fraik was seriously impaired by alcohol, exceeded the speed limit by a substantial margin, crossed the double centre line while approaching the peak of a hill combined with a curve and collided almost head-on with the Jacques vehicle.

There's no such thing as an "average" edition

By JAMES LARDNER
Washington Post

At about 3 p.m. on the afternoon of Aug. 16, 1977, the story of the century flashed across the orange groves and into the well-manicured jungle that surrounds the National Enquirer's headquarters in Lantana, Fla. Editor Iain Calder summoned his key aides to a closed-door strategy session, and simultaneously issued instructions to have a small jet made ready at West Palm Beach airport.

Elvis Presley was dead. The Enquirer was mobilizing.

Associated editor Tom Kuncl, one of those invited to the fateful conference, stands about 72 inches high, weighs in at 215 pounds, wears a moustache, exhibits a quick, cynical sense of humor now and then, and generally employs pen and paper when he takes notes — in short, the characteristics widely associated with the species print journalist Americanus.

Kuncl is a former freelance writer who admits to experiencing "a lot of professional shock" when he joined the Enquirer in 1974. He now oversees the paper's four-man Washington bureau, and especially relishes what the Enquirer calls "government waste" stories — for instance, one about a grant to study the effect of native dancing on tourism in Haiti.

"I am just delighted that we live under a government that does these kinds of things," says Kuncl. "I get these NSF grant lists and I am just a different man for a couple of days. I say, no, they're not really spending $150,000 on the mating habits of some species of shrimp in Upper Volta."

Kuncl was not, however, the most attentive or enthusiastic of the Elvis post-mortem conferes. "I just never did know much about Elvis," he says. In addition, he was in "a period of grief" over a story that Calder had just killed.

So Kuncl was quite taken aback when Calder looked across the desk and said, "Tom, what have you got going right now that's important?" The answer, as Calder knew full well, was nothing. "You go to Memphis," said Calder.

Kuncl was in the air at about 6 p.m., accompanied by four reporters and a photographer, while other Enquirer operatives were being flown in from other directions. Ultimately Kuncl, who viewed the assignment simply as "a good police beat story," would have a team of 20 working under him.

On arrival, his team tracked down the two fire department paramedics who had been the first outsiders to see Elvis in his deceased state. They were signed to an exclusive contract with the Enquirer, and whisked away to a hotel room to tell their stories. Several reporters from the Memphis newspapers, an assortment of band members, camp followers and groupies, and Elvis' stepmother Dee Presley were likewise located and (as required) put under contract.

"There was alot of pragmatism in the air in Memphis which dovetailed with what I was there to do," says Kuncl.

Kuncl himself grabbed a yellow pages and turned to "P" for "psychics," where, sure enough, he found several listings, including one seer who had spoken to Elvis shortly before his death. Yes indeed, Elvis had had premonitions.

"Now it's hard for me to look you in the eye and tell you that this was a coup of some sort," says Kuncl, a man with only an average amount of interest in the supernatural — which at the Enquirer is much less than average. "But in fact it was.

"I'm not in charge of human nature," says Kuncl. "I just report it."

Once a death has been ruled the product of natural causes — as Elvis' was — Tennessee law forbids public disclosure of the findings of an autopsy. As a result, the 12 people present at the Presley autopsy — a list quickly compiled by Kuncl's team — were unusually reticent when the Enquirer contacted them. But as every reporter knows, even a source who can't say anything gnerally says something. Thus an Enquirer reporter might ask a question like, "Doctor, isn't it true that his heart was extremely enlarged?" And a doctor might reply, "Well, I wouldn't say extremely . . ." and go on to give the exact dimensions.

"In the end we knew virtually every substance that was in (Elvis') body," says Kuncl.

The Sept. 6 issue carried six pages of Elvis material. Among the revelations:

—"In the months before his death . . . Elvis Presley surrounded himself with flunkies who submitted to violent and humiliating abuse" including karate kicks to the groin, but "dared not retaliate or even complain."

—Elvis "was unable to pass a mirror without marvelling at himself."

—When his girl friend Ginger Alden found him slumped on the bathroom floor, "his eyes were closed and his face was a purplish color and swollen looking. His tongue was sticking out of his mouth and he'd bitten down on it."

But the biggest coup of all was the front-page photograph of "Elvis at Peace" — in his open coffin at Graceland. No one is telling just who took that picture or how many thousands of dollars the Enquirer paid for it. Vernon Presley, Elvis' father, said he was "heartbroken" after seeing the picture. "I have no idea who would have taken advantage of a family during this situation. I don't know anybody who would want to do that, but maybe someday we'll know."

What is public record is that the Sept. 6 issue — according to the Enquirer — sold 6,688,563 copies, or nearly a million more than the previous best-seller, an issue that had featured "The Amazing Appeal of 'Roots'" and "How Freddie Prinze Rehearsed His Own Suicide."

"I don't think Elvis was selling that well when he was alive," says Kuncl.

Even an average issue of the Enquirer (that's a figure of speech — no issue is average) sells more copies than any other weekly publication except TV Guide. Although its publisher is unable to offer a figure for the Enquirer's net worth, he adds that two years ago he turned down an offer to buy the paper for $50 million.

The Enquirer and its legions of readers are in the habit of meeting at the supermarket checkout counter these days, sometimes furtively. At 35 cents a copy (or about 20 cents a pound), the paper rates as one of the outstanding buys of any shopping expedition.

Inside a typical issue:

—A voice-o-graph expert concludes that President Carter lied when he appraised the nation's economic condition as sound during his State of the Union message.

—We learn that Charles Bronson, shooting a movie on a bitter cold day in New York City, would not let his police escorts warm up inside Bronson's unused trailer.

—Ten "leading psychics" predict 1978. One says Elizabeth Taylor will have a nervous breakdown and divorce John Warner (the connection between the two events is unspecified), while another says she will "enter politics, become an ambassador and help settle the Israeli-Arab dispute." Yet another seer promises that "an Arab state will tow icebergs to the desert as a source of fresh water — and in one of them, stunned engineers will discover relics of an alien expedition whose members died in an Arctic ice storm."

—We are told that, during a recent U.S. tour, a tyrannical Romanian gymnastics coach refused to let Nadia Comaneci eat more than a piece of lettuce and a few slices of tomato a day.

—An Enquirer reporter dressed up as a sheik from a mythical Arab island kingdom tells how he had senators and congressmen shamelessly kowtowing to him during an impromptu visit to the Capitol.

—A flock of sheep have mysteriously sprouted grass on their backs, and there is a photograph to prove it. Says the caption: "Maybe, to paraphrase Greta Garbo, the animals 'just want to be a lawn.'"

For the people who produce it, as well as those who read it, the Enquirer is extricably linked with the act of checking out. Going to work there, if you are some sort of newspaperperson, means checking out of the known world, taking a short ride on a UFO, and winding up on a preposterous, semi-tropical, journalist's funny farm.

Here reporters and editors live in oceanfront condominiums, are paid fabulous salaries supplemented by fabulous expense accounts, and scour the world in quest of the bizarre, the juicy and the uplifting.

"One of the biggest things I had to get accustomed to when I came here was spending money," says Kuncl. "Money is almost paper clips . . . We can easily be spending $20,000 for something that's going to end up in the trashcan." Indeed, reporter John Harris was commissioned to conduct a worldwide search for utopia, at Enquirer expense, and returned six months later with the announcement that utopia, regretably, had eluded him.

For a story about the escapades of some obscure Kennedy offspring the Enquirer will gladly stand the expense of a month-long stakeout. Or if more devious measures are called for, a reporter and photographer will descend on their quarry's preparatory school claiming to represent, let us say, "Soccer Digest," and will spend four hours chatting with the soccer team simply in order to get two quotes from the unsuspecting young Kennedy who belongs to it.

The starting salary for an Enquirer reporter is $32,400 — about double what The New York Times pays. And the latest experiment in a long tradition of bizarre recruiting practices has been to hire reporters with absolutely no prior training or experience. "I want the next presient of ITT. I want the next president of U.S. Steel," says Iain Calder, a Scotsman who is part of an ample contingent from the British school of newspapering. "People who are brilliant . . . people who are aggressive."

What he has gotten are Gail Birnbaum, Barnard College class of '76, Jessica Klein, Harvard '77, and Steve Chao, Harvard '77.

"I really don't believe it either," says Birnbaum, who spends much of her time on the road, supported wholly by an expense account, while she and Klein share minimal accommodations in Lantana. Before joining the Enquirer, Birnbaum's highest-paying job was for a public relations firm at $175 a week. She never worked for her school paper, the Columbia Spectator — "a serious omission on my part," she says — but has had several articles published in the Enquirer so far, including one titled "What Is Happiness?"

Generoso Pope Jr., owner, publisher and, by all accounts, the man in charge of the National Enquirer, has been saying for years now that his goal is a circulation of 20 million. It is a figure based, he explains, on achieving a readership comparable, when measured against total U.S. population, to that enjoyed by the most successful British national newspapers. Obviously, he has a considerable way to go yet, but he has come a way, too. Since 1952, when Pope paid $20,000 cash for the Enquirer, then a moribund New York weekly with scarcely any staff, he has built circulation from 17,000 to nearly 6,000,000.

The best concise description of the brand of journalism currently practised at the Enquirer is Calder's — "I keep telling the editors I'm looking for gee-whiz stories," he says. And nothing with limited appeal. In an accent that reeks of Glasgow and Fleet Street, Calder talks of reaching out to a typical Enquirer reader he calls "Missy Smith in Kansas City."

Nearly a million readers' worth of that growth has occurred just within the last year, spurred by the Enquirer's new TV advertising campaign.

Missy Smith does not like downbeat stories. She gets enough of those in the daily paper. So when people with crippling disabilities, or terminal ailments find their way into the pages of the Enquirer, as they frequently do, we almost always discover that they are deriving renewed strength and hope from some wondrous medical innovation, from the attentions of family and friends, or from the stacks of cards and letters sent them by previously alerted Enquirer readers.

As for sex, "We try to do it in such a way that people almost won't notice it," says Calder. Violence has been out for about the last eight years, since the end of what Pope unemotionally calls the "blood and gore era" (when the Enquirer was known for such timeless headlines as "Mom Boils Baby and Eats It"). There is virtually no sports coverage — sports has a limited appeal, explains Pope — and next to no politics.

Instead, the Enquirer runs on a blend of medicine, science and parascience stories; tales of personality quirks, feuds and affairs of the heart involving a select group of celebrities, usually TV stars; first-person accounts of adventures and disasters; scandalous stories of government inefficiency and profligacy; and startling public opinion surveys.

British journalists, as a rule, start younger and with less formal education than their American counterparts, and earn less money. "I still pinch myself almost every month," says Calder, "because for someone from a little Scottish mining village . . ." The thought trails off, but Calder is presumably thinking of his salary as well as of his position — and he is presumably one of the four Enquirer executives who, according to Pope, draw salaries of $100,000 or more.

The Enquirer is full of "Brits," a category that encompasses Australians, South Africans and Irishmen trained on British papers. The virtues of some of the Brits are a popular topic of debate among the Enquirer's non-Brits. "They're great when it comes to 'Vicar Found in Love Nest,'" says one home-grown editor, "but if you want to know the implications of nuclear power you would be better off asking your parakeet . . ."

If there is friction — or merely heightened competition — between Brits and Americans at the Enquirer, it is probably not unintended. The same managerial tool was used to good effect, after all, when the Allies invaded Normandy. While other American workers worry about being replaced by machines, at the Enquirer they worry about being replaced by Brits.

Off-duty, the Brits are known as boaters, golfers and drinkers. A dart board has been set up at one nearby bar to accommodate them, although "they're not very good at darts," says the bartender. "They think they are . . . we go along with it because it's just common knowledge that the British play darts."

A year and a half ago, Pope gave Ruth Annan, a cheerful, fast-talking, compusively organized ex-Time correspondent, the task of making sure that stories in the Enquirer are — of all things — true. And she has attacked her assignment with enormous zeal, treating the ubsubstantiated testimony of Enquirer reporters with approximately the same respect given an anonymous tip from a passing drunk.

Annan is regarded as enjoying the full confidence of her boss, who is the boss. So when she barrels into managing editor Paul Levy's office waving a dictionary and pointing out that he has used a word incorrectly, Levy is attentive. It is in a very subdued tone of voice that he notes that his dictionary and her dictionary appear not to see eye to eye on the matter. And he has nothing at all to say when Annan mentions how her dictionary, like all the volumes in the Enquirer's new reference library, was chosen with enormous care.

Annan's proudest achievement, she says, has been the complete absence of libel suits since her arrival at the Enquirer. Two old $5-million suits are still pending, however — one filed by "Hong Kong Hotel hostess" Marianna Liu, accused by the Enquirer of having had a romance with former president Nixon, and one filed by Carol Burnett, accused of having had an argument with Henry Kissinger in a Washington restaurant.

An eccentric institution, the Enquirer supports its share of eccentric individuals. There is, for instance, Dawson Taylor, a retired Ford dealer from Detroit who now works part-time reading manuscripts for possible serialization — at the rate of 14.3 manuscripts a week, he calculates. Besides being a speed-reader, Taylor has a vocabulary of 200,000 words, by his own account, and is the author of "The Secret of Holing Putts," "The Secret of Bowling Strikes," "The Making of the Pope" and "Your Future in the Automotive Industry," among other books.

Celebrity stories are a world unto themselves, and the Enquirer has two distinct plans of attack when it gets the scent. The first plan is the stakeout — a team of reporters and photographers is commissioned to make pests of themselves gathering tidbits about, say, Raquel Welch's fling with a French actor.

In that particular case, Welch became so incensed that she plotted to elude her pursuers by booking a dummy reservation on a flight from Paris to New York when her real destination was Sardinia. But when Welch and her fling boarded their plane, according to editor Mike Hoy, they found an Enquirer reporter and photographer seated immediately behind them. There followed a "wild and ludicrous" two weeks in Sardinia, during which Welch and the Enquirer team changed hotels about four times. "It cost us both a lot of money," says Hoy wearily.

What resulted from these escapades was "Raquel Welch's new hush-hush romance:"

"Raquel Welch is enjoying a hot new hush-hush romance with a dashing French actor, Andre Weinfeld. The couple has been together for over two months in Paris, sharing the same hotel suite, and behaving like 'lovestruck teenagers.' But Raquel has gone to incredible lengths to shield Andre from publicity.

". . . This Enquirer reporter was on the plane with the couple when they flew off for a recent vacation on the Mediterranean island of Sardinia.

"They cuddled, kissed and carried on like two people very much in love during the flight.

"Then they went to a seafront bungalow and kissed, snuggled close and held hands while they sunbathed on the beach."

Elsewhere in the same story, Welch was quoted as telling an interviewer (not from the Enquirer), "it's too awful to see someone you love being devoured by publicity . . . I'm determined this won't happen with Andre." The Enquirer, the story proudly proclaimed, had "penetrated the wall of secrecy set up by Raquel."

The reason for all this unseemly behavior, of course, is the tendency of some celebrities not to talk to the Enquirer. But few celebrities can resist "senior roving editor" Henry Gris, with his silver hair, continental manners and indeterminate accent.

"Hollywood is a laboratory of human stories," says Gris, who joined the Enquirer in 1969 after two decades with United Press International. "And the advantage of these human stories is that they are compressed into a very short period of time." Celebrities, like laboratory mice, have brief lives. "Hollywood is full of these beautiful white mice who fall from very high pinnacles of success . . . I am an observer of the human stories and this is why I came to Hollywood."

"Some years ago," says an editor, "we were in a panic for a downpage story. Peter Lawford's wife had just left him. Gris called up Lawford and said, 'Wouldn't you say, Peter, that this was the woman of your life?' 'That's it exactly' said Lawford."

More recently, James Coburn told Gris he had left his wife essentially because the time had come for him to enter a new seven-year life cycle.

During a recent conversation with Princess Grace, "we spoke about the way her daughter was being hounded by the press," says Gris. It apparently never occurred to the princess to hold Gris responsible for the fact that his employer, the Enquirer, has consistently had its hounds near the front of the pack. "She calls me Henry," Gris explains. "I call her Grace." Cary, Glenn, Kirk, Shirley, Audrey and Ingrid also call him Henry.

How does he do it? "I give the people something of myself," says Gris. "I have known so many fabulous people in the world . . . My range of interests is so wide . . . It's an exchange of thoughts, never just an interview." During a 40-year career as a journalist, he has exchanged thoughts with, among others, Hitler and Mussolini. "People know me, like me, enjoy me.

"I am very strict in my moral code," he adds. "When a man suddenly changes his mind and says, 'I didn't realize, this is something I should not have told you,' I will honor that."

During the Spanish Civil War, for example, Count Ciano, Mussolini's son-in-law, "blurted out" to him the news that an Italian submarine had just sunk a Russian ship carrying supplies to the loyalists. Ciano phoned the next morning, however, to ask Gris not to print the story, and Gris obliged.

In 1945, he was "a tired war correspondent who wanted to stop all the nonsense of ducking bombs," so he went to work for UPI reporting American news — particularly of celebrities — for foreign newspapers. It was a "very specialized, very personalized a-la-carte service," he says.

In November, 1958, Gris went to interview Tyrone Power, who was filming a movie in Spain. "He was very depressed," says Gris, so "I spent the day telling him of my own experiences . . ."

"You are very generous," said Power when Gris had finished cheering him up.

A day later, Tyrone Power was dead, and Henry Gris had the last, if somewhat one-sided, interview. "That was my lucky story," says Gris. "I had the feeling on that day that somehow he gave me back what he owed me."

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — Sharply higher prices at New York sent the Toronto stock market into a moderate advance in active mid-afternoon trading today.

Siebens Oil and Gas Ltd. plunged 4¼ to $26¼ a share on the sale of 85,975 shares following its opening resumption after the company reported the termination of takeover talks with an unidentified major firm.

Quebec Manitou Mines Ltd. gained seven cents to 36 cents on the sale of 5,000 shares after announcing that majority shareholder Manitou-Barvue Mines Ltd. is offering 40 cents a share for all remaining Quebec Manitou shares.

Among industrials, General Motors climbed 1¼ to $72¼, Asbestos Corp. 1⅛ to $39½, Husky Oil 1 to $32⅜, Gulf Oil Canada ¾ to $29½ and Bell Canada ⅛ to $54⅞.

Aquitaine fell ½ to $17¼, Petrofina Canada ½ to $20, Federal Industries A ½ to $5½, Bow Valley Industries ½ to $25⅝ and Genstar ¼ to $26½.

In addition, the dollar gained ground in Europe, and U.S. automakers issued early-April car sales reports that one broker termed "just excellent."

Gulf Oil led the active list, up ⅛ to $24⅜. A 442,000-share block traded at $24¼.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were slightly higher in moderate afternoon trading today on the Montreal Stock Exchange.

Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce gained ¼ at $27¾, Dominion Textile A ¼ at $10¼, Shell Canada ⅛ at $16, Stelco A ⅛ at $24, Northern Telecom ⅛ at $28¾ and Moore Corp. ¼ at $34⅛. Atco A lost ⅛ at $13⅞, Crush International ¾ at $13¾, Zeller's ⅛ at $7¼ and Inco A ⅛ at $18⅛.

London

LONDON (CP) — Prices moved sharply lower at the close of active trading today on the London stock market.

The London Financial Times index of 30 industrials closed at 452.9, off 7.3.

Leading industrials edged up from the day's lows, while gold stocks eased with lower bullion prices.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rallied in heavy trading today, resuming its recent upturn after a mid-week pause.

Analysts said the ebullient mood stemmed more from the steady recent performance of the market itself than from any single news development.

Japan To Push Imports

TOKYO (Reuter) — The Japanese government is planning special imports worth at least $4 billion in fiscal 1978 to reduce the country's trade and current account surplus, Kiichi Miyazawa, director-general of the Economic Planning Agency, says.

Miyazawa told a parliamentary budget committee meeting that emergency imports totalling $1.02 billion for fiscal 1977, ended last month, have almost all been received, except for some agricultural products.

Toshio Komoto, international trade and industry minister, said earlier that a special cabinet meeting would be called soon to discuss new surplus trimming measures.

The current account surplus was expected to reach at least $13 billion in fiscal 1977 compared with an estimate last October of about $10 billion.

General Electric

General Electric Co., the large U.S. manufacturer of electrical equipment, reported profits for the first quarter ended March 31 rose to $247.8 million, or $1.09 a share, compared with $215.4 million, or 95 cents a share a year earlier.

Sales rose to $4.4 billion for the quarter, compared with $4.1 billion in 1977.

The company said it expects results for the full year to show improvement over 1977, with the rate of gain to be affected by future direction of the U.S. economy.

The company had a 1977 profit of $1.09 billion, or $4.79 a share, on sales of $17.5 billion.

Steep Rock

Last year's operating and financial improvements at Steep Rock Iron Mines Ltd., Atikokan, Ont., have continued through the first quarter of 1978, the company's president said.

L. J. Lamb told the annual meeting that the improvements mean the firm will continue to build working capital so it can participate in new developments when current operations cease.

Steep Rock will terminate its iron-ore operations in northwestern Ontario by the end of 1979 because of low ore reserves and a decision by Caland Ore Co. Ltd. not to renew its lease.

A decision was also made earlier not to proceed with development of an iron-ore deposit at Bending Lake and to postpone development of an iron deposit at Lake St. Joseph.

Lamb said uncertainties in the exchange rate of the United States dollar and the outcome of current labor negotiations could affect 1978 profitability. However, he expects the 1978 profit to be in line with the 1977 operating profit of $2.8 million or 34 cents a share.

Granduc Mines

Granduc Mines Ltd. reports a loss of $17,707,269 for the year ended Dec. 31, 1977, compared with a loss for 1976 of $1,148,564.

The company said in a news release that the loss comprises a loss on the year's operation of $2,224,672 and an extraordinary item of $15,482,597.

The extraordinary item represents the writing down of mining properties to a nominal value of $1 and writing off mine development and pre-production costs and deferred royalties receivable. These losses are 69 cents a share before the extraordinary items and $5.23 a share including the extraordinary items.

A later development has been the announcement by the lessees that the Granduc mine will close on June 30, 1978.

Granduc has 250 claims and leases in the Leduc-Unuk River area of northern B.C.

The company said its annual meeting has been delayed until June 27.

Western Premiers in 2-Day Talks

YORKTON, Sask. (CP) — The premiers of the four western provinces were to open a two-day meeting today to deal with proposals for a new interprovincial energy system, a new feed-grain marketing system and federal intrusions into provincial jurisdiction.

The agenda for the closed meeting has the premiers discussing economic issues today and other matters Friday.

Bill Bennett, premier of British Columbia, was to begin the meeting with a call for direct provincial input into national economic planning.

Premier Allan Blakeney of Saskatchewan has called the federal move to lower provincial sales taxes "discourteous." He said the federal government should have discussed the move with the provinces before provincial budgets were struck this spring.

Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed was expected to comment on international trade and tariff arrangements.

Blakeney's new feed-grain marketing approach was also to be discussed. He wants feed-grain producers to be able to market through the Canadian wheat board without using the elevator system.

The producer would get the benefits of an initial payment and an assured price from the board, while the western livestock industry would save the handling costs.

An Alberta proposal to increase the price for domestic wheat to $6 a bushel was also on the agenda.

Hugh Horner, Alberta transportation minister, was to deal with a report by western industry ministers, and Lougheed was to deal with the Hall commmission report on grain handling and transportation.

On Friday, Bennett again leads off the day, discussing constitutional matters. He is to deal with the report of a task force on the constitution and areas of federal intrusion into provincial jurisdiction.

Manitoba Premier Sterling Lyon is to deal with interprovincial energy co-operation. A proposal is expected on an electrical grid system in which there would be a co-ordinated exchange of electricity among the three Prairie provinces.

Probe Pushed On Stationery

The NDP continues to question the government on whether Social Credit cabinet ministers used their official stationery to solicit funds or to recruit party members.

Charles Barber (NDP—Victoria) asked Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy Wednesday if the government has set rules or a code of ethics governing such uses of stationery.

Mrs. McCarthy said the question, raised by Barber during question period in the house, was out of order.

Her response was met with hoots of derision from Opposition benches.

On Tuesday, Rosemary Brown (NDP—Vancouver-Burrard) asked Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm if he'd used stationery to solicit membership for the party.

Vander Zalm didn't recall doing so.

Barber put the same question to Municipal Affairs and Housing Minister Hugh Curtis who gave a similar reply.

Wednesday, Barber suggested to Speaker Harvey Schroeder that his question to McCarthy was not out of order and repeated it.

McCarthy said the question intimates some misuse of stationery on the part of the government, and she wouldn't respond to the question.

Outside the house, Barber said McCarthy's reluctance to answer the question tells him clearly the government has no policy nor a code of ethics on the use of stationery.

When asked why he was asking, Barber replied only that the line of questioning will unfold along a timetable, and would give no further hints on what point the NDP is trying to make.

Job Plan Failure, Says Lea

The Social Credit government's plan to launch a $76.1-million job-creation program is an admission it has failed miserably to create long-term jobs, Graham Lea (NDP—Prince Rupert) said Wednesday.

Lea told the legislature the $4.28-billion B.C. budget is hypocritical and represents another in a long line of broken promises.

He said during budget speech debate that because there are more unemployed in B.C. than when the present government took office in December, 1975, the Social Credit promise to improve the economy has been broken. Statistics Canada says there were 108,000 persons unemployed in the province last month.

Lea said the budget does not propose any real solutions to the current economic problems.

"And this budget in the long run will break this province," he said. "It is not a blueprint for economic prosperity . . . they have failed."

In his budget speech, Wolfe said the government intends to spend $76.1 million on 11 programs to create 10,000 new jobs. Lea said the announcement shows the government has been inept and cannot be trusted.

Futility Surrounds Meeting

The multi-party committee investigating the operation of Crown corporations met officials of the B.C. Housing Corp. Wednesday amid feelings of futility.

One of the NDP members, Norman Levi (Vancouver-Burrard), said there was little reason to probe deeply into the housing corporation since it is up for sale.

He called the questioning of the corporation officials an exercise in futility, although fellow NDPer Dennis Cocke (New Westminster) said a quick overview of the operation of the former Dunhill Developments might be useful.

Housing Minister Hugh Curtis said Friday the housing corporation is being sold for philosophical reasons. He declined to name the asking price.

Bridge Job Work for 8

A contract to build a 300-foot pedestrian overpass across the Trans-Canada Highway at Portage Road has been awarded to Dura Construction of Saanichton.

The two-month, $100,000 highways ministry project will start at the end of April and employ eight workers.

Keep BCR Line - Plea

that the provincial government could sign the death warrant of the forest industry in this community of 4,000 if it doesn't look beyond the financial perspective of the report.

Schuck says he isn't surprised the commission suggested closing the line but he is surprised the provincial cabinet hasn't come to its own decision on the future of the line.

Schuck rejected the commission's suggestion of financial aid because of the money that would be saved saying it's an attempt to buy off the community.

Fort Nelson council plans to discuss the matter today.

The report said Fort Nelson can survive and prosper even if the extension is closed.

The commission said that only the local forest industry, which employs in between 300 and 600 persons, would suffer significantly from the closure.

Prior to the line's completion in 1971, all commodities went to Fort Nelson by road or air and the line did little to change the pattern, the commission said.

"Today, three large trucking firms operate terminals in Fort Nelson, and foodstuffs, both perishable and non-perishable, and most consumer goods continue to be delivered to Fort Nelson by truck," the commission said.

The report also said construction of the Foothills natural gas pipeline paralleling the Alaska-Canada highway could bring an economic boom to the area even if the railway line is closed.

"There is no necessity for a railroad for this construction project to proceed, as the pipe would in any event have to be transported by truck to the construction sites even if moved by rail for a portion of the haul," the commission said.

Barrett, a former BCR president, said it is intolerable that the government had not made a decision after informing the commission that it had only three weeks to make its recommendations.

The commission was pressed into filing a separate report on the Fort Nelson extension by Dec. 31 because of BCR plans to upgrade the line which would have required an early calling of tenders so the work could be done during the summer. If it had to wait another year, $4 million would have been added to the projected cost of $35 million.

Jim Rustad of Prince George, chairman of the northern interior sector of the Council of Forest Industries, said his group has always viewed the BCR as a road to resources.

"We feel that the developmental portions should be looked at in a different light than the developed portions. We feel that there is no viable alternative mode of transportation to the railroad in the Fort Nelson area, and that abandonment of the line means abandonment of jobs, of mills and virtually whole communities."

John Piety, spokesman for the Fort Nelson Chamber of Commerce, said closure of the rail extension would be a major step back for the community.

"It will put the community in limbo," he said, noting that the village had its first taste of that during the three months before the report was made public.

"We've been held in ransom for three months," Piety said. "We've been optimistic on one hand and have faith in the government — but we fear a decision based on political expediency."

Bob Lunde, general manager of Tackama Forest Products in Fort Nelson said his firm would probably go out of business if the rail line is closed.

"There would certainly be no future here. Fort Nelson would become an economic basket case."

Ed Smith (SC-North Peace River), member of the provincial legislature for the area, could not be reached for comment.

Earlier, Premier Bill Bennett, who is in Yorkton, Sask., for a meeting of western premiers, said the government is doing its own analysis of the report.

"I won't move on it (the report) until there has been an assessment done by the ministries in government," Bennett said.

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal prisoners last month made 2,315 requests for files about themselves from the Canadian Penitentiary Service, the Commons justice committee was told Wednesday.

The figures were released as MPs questioned Gordon Fairweather, chief human rights commissioner, and Inger Hansen, privacy commissioner, about the operations of the seven-month old human rights commission.

Pesticides from Soap New Saanich Industry

Sergei Condrashoff says his compounds are safe

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

A Saanich man has started an industry that manufactures pesticides from soap.

And it's safe — there's no need to fear being poisoned if you accidentally spill some on your hands.

The venture of Sergei Condrashoff, a 46-year-old entomologist living on an Old West Saanich Road farm, is considered by Victoria federal forestry scientists a major step towards a reduction in poisonous chemicals for controlling garden, farm and forest pests.

"We plan to start a similar industry in the United States," Condrashoff said in an interview.

"Our first customer is a U.S. logging company which is concerned about the damage caused to the environment by chemical sprays."

His first soapy compound is for controlling aphids and mealy insects. The latter are mainly found on indoor plants.

"Tests conducted showed that it didn't kill bees unless severe doses were administered," he said.

"And there is no necessity to use concentrated doses."

The compound also did not kill useful insects, like the ladybug.

Condrashoff plans to develop other soap combinations to control pests like the carrot fly, root maggots and caterpillars.

Soaps for controlling pests have been known for some time but they have been over-shadowed by powerful chemicals first introduced in the early 1940s.

Some not only destroy insects, but birds and mammals.

And now many sprays are known to cause cancer and other malignant diseases in man.

Soaps are fatty acids and there are many varieties of such acids found in plants and animals. Each will act differently on insects.

Most household soaps today are only so in name. There are no pure soaps. They are either detergents or fatty acids combined with chemicals.

Condrashoff, well known as an inventor in the field of toys, worked as a scientist for 16 years at the Burnside Federal Forestry Research Station before going into private research in 1970.

"I became more and more interested in environmental problems arising from the use of hazardous chemicals," he said.

"People were also asking me for advice on the use of toxic sprays. This decided me to work on developing safe sprays for the home gardener."

He received the cooperation of the forest research station, he said.

"But they can only go so far. The job of developing sprays has to be undertaken by the private sector."

He said he also plans to combine soapy sprays with chemicals to deal with some species of insects difficult to control.

"But I will use chemicals which break down — not the kind that remain intact for years like DDT, and accumulate in the fatty tissues of animals and man."

Condrashoff carries on the development and research on sprays on his berry and cherry tree farm and calls his firm Safer Agro-Chem.

"We have just started and we still have to work out methods of marketing and distribution."

Egg Race Slow To Boil

The Great B.C. Egg Race goes Saturday despite the fact there are only three confirmed entries.

Organizers had received 250 inquiries from all parts of the province.

The race starts at 10 a.m. in the foyer of the Provincial Museum.

Despite the lack of entries, the race will be fun to watch, museum director Yorke Edwards said today.

"And we may still get a few entries before Saturday."

None of the confirmed entries is from Victoria. One is from Nanaimo and the others from the mainland.

Edwards said he is not surprised at the small number of entries.

"In Toronto, where the race originated, they had the same experience when the race was held for the first time in 1976," he said.

MINISTERS RIP GLAZIER

'An Incredible Gaffe'

By MARK HUME
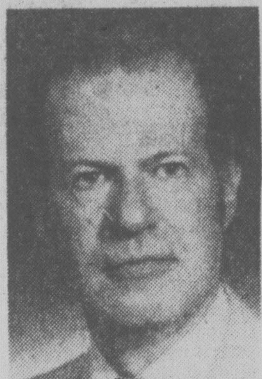
Times Staff

Victoria council's finance committee chairman Ald. Murray Glazier took a broadside from three provincial cabinet ministers today for statements Wednesday that the government intended to renege on promises to pay full municipal taxes.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe, Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis, and Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf, all attacked Glazier for misreading the government's new Municipalities Aid Amendment Act.

Glazier had said the bill showed the government intended to put a ceiling on the amount of taxes it would pay to the municipality, thereby sheltering $90 million of its $140-million property holdings in Victoria.

But Wolfe said Glazier had completely misread the act and had based his statements on explanatory notes, not clauses in the bill itself.



CURTIS
. . .'Glazier just wants headline'

Wolfe said the note which says "the sums payable under subsection 1 shall not exceed 10 per cent of the sums levied for the preceding calander year," presented the former, not the new formula.

"This has been completely misinterpreted by Victoria," said Wolfe.

Curtis was harsher in his attack.

"It's an incredible gaffe — he didn't even read the bill," the minister said

"Ald. Glazier has been unwilling or unable to accept the government's statements (to pay full taxes) at face value. Apparently Ald. Glazier doesn't want the facts he just wants a headline. It's shameful on his part. One has to wonder at his motives."

He said last year at the Union of B.C. Municipalities convention he had promised that the province would begin paying full taxes to municipalities in 1978.

By introducing the Municipalities Aid Amendment Act on Monday, Curtis said he had kept that promise.

All three ministers stressed that the province intends to pay full taxes to Victoria and to all other B.C. municipalities.

Provincial holdings in Victoria total more than 100 acres. However, both municipal and provincial authorities have agreed that some of those properties such as the legislature, the Provincial Museum and other similar holdings should be exempt from taxation because of their service to the whole province.

Sorry, Sorry

Ald. Murray Glazier, contacted after the three ministers had held their joint press conference, admitted he and senior staff at city hall had misread the bill.

"It's regrettable, but it happens in the first reading of legislation sometimes," he said.

"I believe my reaction to the act was incorrect and I regret that."

Saanich Stalls, Trees Fall

While a proposed tree-cutting control bylaw remained stalled by arguments at Saanich municipal hall, one of the biggest commercial property owners in Saanich was cutting down several trees Wednesday on property at Royal Oak.

And Mayor Mel Couvelier, although angered by the situation, conceded that the municipality is powerless to act against Royal Oak Inn owner Joseph Isherwood.

"I guess he's just stripping the land. There's nothing we can do to stop him," Couvelier said.

He did say, however, that if any of the trees being felled were found to be on municipal property, Saanich would sue the company.

But Isherwood today denied that any of the trees in question were on publicly-owned land.

He also rejected the mayor's comment that healthy trees are being cut while diseased and scrub trees remain.

He claimed the main stand of timber on land adjacent to Beaver Lake Park has been left intact, and there has been only selective cutting on the Royal Oak Inn land which is within the Agricultural Land Reserve.

Some of the trees would have been blown down anyway, because an adjoining owner's tree clearing had left them exposed, and others were "in the way" of planned recreational facilities, Isherwood said.

Municipal officials sent to investigate Wednesday, following complaints from neighboring residents, later reported that about 80 good-sized trees would be removed.

But Isherwood said he didn't know the total.

He also denied a suggestion that the tree felling was prompted by a fit of pique, after Saanich council last month turned down plans for a major housing development on the Isherwood property.

The proposed tree cutting bylaw, designed mainly to curb wholesale tree removal by developers, is now in its 12th draft and earlier this week was still being criticized by some council members, citizens and community groups.

It has been referred to the newly-appointed environmental advisory committee.

McEvay Knocks Blair

MCEVAY
. . .'no rubber-stamping'

Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee chairman J.W. McEvay today criticized Ald. Colin Blair of Esquimalt for walking out of Tuesday's meeting on awarding of grants.

Blair stalked out without voting and without finding out how much research had been done by the vetting committee.

McEvay, also an Esquimalt alderman, said Blair was wrong to run to the media, protesting the ease with which grants were approved, without finding out how much research had actually been done.

"Had he stayed for the meeting he would have had an opportunity to fully discuss with the other elected officials and the chairman of the vetting committee (Harold Moist) each application, the financial status of the organizations applying, other sources of funding available and their contributions to the community," McEvay said.

He said elected officials are responsible for making final decisions and Moist's committee members had been chosen because of their expertise.

Serving with Moist were architect John Di Castri, Stuart Drummond, executive director of the United Way; Dr. Brian Wharf, head of social work at the University of Victoria, and Derrick Thompson, executive director of the G.R. Pearkes Clinic for the Handicapped.

Moist's committee had recommended that 12 of the 46 requests for grants be refused, McEvay said, and the intermunicipal committee had refused an additional five.

"We didn't rubber stamp what those people had done," he added.

"To opt out of one's responsibility of attending a meeting, taking part in debate and decision-making, does not give one the right to criticize," he said.

'Follow That Oil Track'

A truck driver drove 17 blocks Tuesday afternoon dripping fuel oil on city streets.

Victoria fire department said the Gulf Oil truck was at Belmont and Ryan when the delivery hose apparently got caught on something, unwound as the truck pulled away and finally broke off the tank connection.

A fire department vehicle responding to a neighbor's call followed the oily track and caught up to the truck in the 1500-block Bank, but not before more oil was spilled.

The unsuspecting driver had stopped the truck to make a delivery and started the pump before walking to the rear of the vehicle to pull out the hose and nozzle.

Without a hose, oil was gushing directly on to the street.

OFFICIAL DOWNPLAYS SQUEEZE PLAY

Extra Campsites at Long Beach

Parks Canada has prepared a contingency plan to provide 500 temporary campsites if the federal government delays or decides against buying a much-needed privately-owned campground adjacent to Pacific Rim National Park at Long Beach, superintendent Frank Camp said Wednesday.

"We will look after the visitors," he said. "We have the space to accommodate camping vehicles."

Bert Braiden, Calgary developer and owner of the 217-acre, 400-site campground, wants the federal government to buy him out, and has indicated he won't open the camp this year. His asking price is said to be $3.5 million.

It had been feared closure of Braiden's campground would leave the area without enough campsites to handle visitors this summer.

Pacific Rim Park has a campground overlooking the beach at Green Point with room for only 91 vehicles, plus a walk-in beach tenting area with about 50 sites.

But superintendent Camp said Braiden hasn't got Parks Canada in a squeeze, as some people seem to think.

If Braiden's campground is closed this summer, the day-use areas in the park will be opened to campers, he said, providing 500 sites.

CAMP
. . . contingency plan

Major day-use area are at Combers Beach, Wickaninnish Inn, and an area about 1½ miles west of the Green Point campsite. There are other fairly large parking areas scattered in the park.

Camp said the day-use areas would be provided with some essential services, but not as many as those in the permanent campground at Green Point.

If the government doesn't buy the Braiden campground and it doesn't open, Parks Canada would have to consider establishing additional permanent campsites in the park, he said.

The Braiden campground borders the west end of the park, six kilometres south of Tofino.

Parks Canada encouraged the development of the private campground because its policy is to leave camping facilities at Long Beach to private enterprise.

It inherited the Green Point campground from the provincial parks branch.

Federal officials are lukewarm to taking over the Braiden property because it doesn't come up to federal standards.

203 Give Their Blood

Blood donors totalled 203 at the Red Cross clinic at Spectrum School on Wednesday.

Since the start of the week, a total of 528 pints of blood have been donated at clinics at three secondary schools — Reynolds, Dunsmuir and Spectrum.

Today the clinic is being held at Oak Bay Secondary and on Friday at Mount Douglas.

Not So Fast, Says Campbell

Capital Regional District chairman Jim Campbell said Wednesday his grants committee chairman Ald. Shirley Dowell was premature in indicating the CRD had agreed to provide $2 million towards the construction of a new civic centre in Victoria.

Campbell said that although the CRD has discussed the possibility of raising $2 million through a quarter-mill levy in the region, no decisions have been made.

"We determined that if you're looking at requirments for financing, it (the region) has the capability, but it was a hypothetical discussion . . . it wasn't intended as a commitment," said Campbell.

He added, however, that the CRD members had been receptive to the idea and were much in favor of the objectives of Dowell and Victoria Ald. Ron McKenzie.

"But we hope to do this in a very orderly way," he said.

Dowell and McKenzie, head of city council's cultural development committee, are jointly working on a feasibility study for a multi-purpose civic centre to be built adjacent to the old Crystal Gardens.

The aldermen said Monday that West Coast Credit Union has agreed to lend $5 million or more to finance the centre, and Dowell said the CRD would be willing to underwrite the loan with $2 million raised by a levy.

Cougars Stumble After Great Start

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

NEW WESTMINSTER — New Westminster Bruins are supposed to have goaltending problems, but Victoria Cougars appear almost reluctant to exploit that so-called weakness.

Cougars managed only 25 direct shots on goal Wednesday as New Westminster, striking for four unanswered goals in the second period, defeated Victoria 7-4 to deadlock the Western Canada Hockey League playoff series.

Now 1-1, the teams return to Victoria's Memorial Arena Friday for the third game in the best-of-seven Western Division final.

Wednesday's shooting performance was somewhat similar to Tuesday's game in Victoria, which the Cougars won, 4-3. In that one, the Cougars managed only 36 shots — again being territorially outplayed as the Bruins have had to rely on rookies to handle their goaltending chores.

With their two regulars Carey Walker and Richard Martens both injured, the Bruins are using Tom Semenchuk and Mike Schlader. Martens started Wednesday and was touched for two quick goals in the first two minutes and 31 seconds of play before it became obvious his back wouldn't allow him to play.

Semenchuk, who went all the way Tuesday, was quickly hustled into action.

The replacement goaltenders have not really been overworked because Victoria's offense has not been sharp.

"The defence plays well when the offense plays well," said Victoria coach Jack Shupe. "When you cut out the offensive part of the game you're coasting. And when you're trying to coast, you'll never get to the puck, make checks or do anything."

Victoria led 3-1 after the first period, then stumbled badly in the second when New Westminster outshot the Cougars, 21-5. That was a disasterous stretch for Victoria.

The Cougars did play well in the first period and for a time in the final 10 minutes of the game.

The letdown in the middle minutes upset Shupe.

"Even in the last 10 minutes we had a chance," he said. (Curt) Fraser, (Sid) Giroux and (Bill) Jobson all had glorious opportunities to score and possibly force overtime."

Bob Janz, George Fritz, Jobson and Mike Shields scored Victoria's goals while Bill Hobbins, Dave Orleski, Terry Kirkham, Kent Reardon Stan Smyl and John Paul Kelly, with two, scored for New Westminster.

Meanwhile, Billings Bighorns and Flin Flon Bombers took 2-0 leads in their best-of-seven divisional finals.

Bighorns defeated Medicine Hat Tigers 8-6 in a game in Medicine Hat and Flin Flon Bombers defeated Regina Pats 11-9 in a home game.

Third-period goals by Pat Conacher, Don Nachbaur and Blake Sullivan gave Billings a 7-4 lead but Medicine Hat came back with goals from Peter Steblyk and Rod Van Slyke.

Billings clinched the game on a goal by Cal Roadhouse with nine seconds left to play when he scored into an empty net.

Flin Flon scored two late goals to edge Pats. Gregg Tebbutt scored three goals to lead Bombers while three-goal efforts were turned in by Dirk Graham and Paul Hogan for Regina.

STEVE CAUTHEN:
I do my best and ride every horse the same way - to win

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

VANCOUVER — "I think I am as good at what I am doing as anyone else."

And there are obviously many horse racing fans who would say "amen" to that.

The author was Steve Cauthen, the teen-age phenom of the horse racing world, who was the guest celebrity Monday on opening night of the 108-day thoroughbred season at Exhibition Park.

And although Stevie Wonder didn't win all five races in which he was entered, he did save his best for the last — a five-length victory on the five-year-old mare Vita Gal in the 10th race. Before then he had two seconds, a third and a fourth. And he drew a record first-night crowd of 11,890 that probably would have bet more than a $1 million if it hadn't been such a miserable evening.

It was the magic of Cauthen's name and a tribute to the youngster, who last year rode horses that won more than $6 million in purse monies, that got many of them there. But somewhere along the line something went wrong and he didn't sign autographs as advertised.

The Cauthen story is warm, forthright and totally uncomplicated; and better than any script writer's dream.

The kid is from Kentucky. His father is a blacksmith. His mother is a trainer. He was brought up in racing. He practiced riding a bale of hay, where he developed his whipping technique, before he went to school in the morning.

His first winning race is also out of a dream world . It was in Kentucky, at River Downs. The date was May 17, 1976. His mother owned the horse. His uncle trained it; and wouldn't you know — it came from last place, and it was a grey.

Since then Cauthen has become the most publicized young rider of any time.

He burst upon the national scene in the toughest jockey colony of them all, New York; he started winning and he hasn't stopped.

Three times he rode six winners in one afternoon at Aqueduct, and that had never been done before. He had 23 uinners in one week, and that was a record. He rode over 500 winners and was named Sportsman of the Year in 1977 and was the first racing personality to be so honored.

He is neither shy, nor boastful. He is youthful in appearance, yet mature in his composure. He is completely at ease before the media and answers each question candidly; and, if he doesn't agree with a quotation upon which a question is founded, he'll correct the questioner to the extent: "I can't believe that."

He is well versed in his own celebrity, and "please" is his polite, and perhaps disarming query, if he doesn't hear the question or understand it fully.

Certainly his career has been touched by luck, but also by genius.

Because he has done just about everything asked of him and he hasn't yet reached his 18th birthday. That will come just before he tries to do what he wants to do most — win the Kentucky Derby. What else does a Kentucky kid think of?

His birthday is May 1 and the derby is May 6.

And he figures he's got a chance, a great chance. All being well, his ride will be on Affirmed, the Santa Anita Derby winner and pre-Kentucky Derby choice. And this Saturday at Hollywood Park in Los Angeles, Cauthen will ride Affirmed in the Hollywood Derby for a purse of $200,000. To him, Affirmed is the best horse he's ridden because "he's a three-year-old and a three-year-old is something you can feel improving all the time.

"I ride every horse the same," said Cauthen, " whether it's in a $100,000 race, or an $8,000 claimer — to win." At Ex Park his win came on a $3,200 claimer.

Cauthen is 5' 2" and, if he's grown taller from last year, he hasn't noticed it. But he has put on weight — all four pounds of it. He weighs 97 pounds "and, if I do have a weight problem in the future, there's nothing I can do about it, is there?"

On his dry spell in Santa Anita when it was hard to come by a winner, "I was riding bad horses," he said.

Fans, to Cauthen, are the same every track over. "They give you a bad time when you lose, because as gamblers and horse players they don't like to lose.

"I have critics," he said, "partiularly in California." Then he explained that there was quite a rivalry between New York, where he gained his reputation, and California. So he doesn't mind. There is only one critic he listens to. That's his father.

The veteran jockeys against whom he competes don't go out of their way to offer him advice, he also revealed. "But I learn from them."

Mistakes? "I have made them. I try not to make too many."

Pressure? "It's easier on me this year than in my first. I am able to relax a lot more. Now I know what to expect."

Stewards? "The stewards in New York are stricter than those in California. Yes, I think the racing is rougher in California."

Cauthen gets a lot of fan mail and even marriage proposals, but so far he's not interested. "I haven't the time."

Steve Cauthen . . . turns 18 in May

His schooling is a matter of time too — when he can find it — "two hours today, 45 minutes tomorrow, an hour in the morning — I am taking a correspondence course and I hope to graduate from high school in June."

Time off he has little of. "Except after my spill, when I was off a month, maybe 10 days is my longest holiday," he said.

That "spill" may be the hallmark of his genius.

It was on May 23 last year he went down in a tangle at Belmont Park and suffered multiple injuries and broken bones.

It was before that on a national telecast tha former riding great Eddie Arcaro was asked about Cauthen.

"Let's not put Steve Cauthen on a pedestal yet," Arcaro said. "The hazards of racing lie ahead. If you ride enough you are going to have spills. They can be serious and everyone reacts differently. Some jockeys can't take the physical shocks of injuries." In other words, school was out until it happened to Cauthen.

Well, it happened, and yet, just one month later, Cauthen was back in the saddle and won, on his first mount; and just as cool as if the spill had never had happened. And he's been winning more than a few ever since.

To straighten out a point. Cauthen also advised a questioner, "I never said I was the best.

"What I said was I do my best and hopefully I can become the best."

That he is now and with complete grace for one of his status and an unbelievable maturity for one of his years.

Red Wings Confident

By The Canadian Press

Only three of the current New York Rangers—defenceman Ron Greschner, left winger Steve Vickers and centre Walt Tkaczuk—were with the team when they last made the National Hockey League playoffs in 1975.

Only one of the current Detroit Red Wings—left winger Nick Libett—was with the team when they last reached post-season competition in 1970.

And Colorado Rockies have never before in their four-year history been in the chase for the Stanley Cup.

Tonight, those three teams will give their home fans the first taste of playoff action in quite some time. But only the Red Wings will have a chance to clinch a series before friendly faces.

The Wings, NHL doormats last season and the league's Cinderella team this year, can clinch their opening-round series with a victory over Atlanta Flames at their Detroit home. The last Red Wings playoff game at the Olympia was when Chicago completed its quarter-final sweep of Detroit in 1970.

"We have to be confident, but not overconfident," said rookie Detroit centre Dale McCourt, who collected 33 goals in his first NHL regular season and scored 4:52 after the opening faceoff to start the Red Wings to a 4-0 lead in Tuesday night's 5-3 victory.

In the other best-of-three preliminary round series, Los Angeles Kings play their home game against Toronto tonight, needing a victory over the Maple Leafs to stay alive.

It took the Maple Leafs three games to eliminate the Kings in the 1975 preliminary round, the only other playoff meeting between the teams. A Toronto victory at Los Angeles tonight would complete a two-game sweep,since the Leafs won the opener, 7-3.

The Rangers lost 4-1 to the Sabres in the opener at Buffalo Tuesday night and need a victory at Madison Square Garden to draw even. The Rockies dropped a 3-2 overtime decision to Philadelphia Flyers and must win at McNichols Arena to force a third game Saturday.

The Rockies' two victories in 21 games against the Flyers have come at McNichols Arena. Colorado has lost all 11 games at the Spectrum in Philadelphia.

Maple Leafs captain Darryl Sittler, who did not score but led his team's checking assault on the Kings, said he thinks Toronto can end the series in Los Angeles.

"I just don't think the Kings have the type of team to outmuscle us," Sittler said.

Kings goalie Rogie Vachon, shelled in Toronto, sees it differently.

Canuck Job Open For Disciplinarian

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Canucks are looking for their sixth coach in nine years today, and general manager Jake Milford says the new mentor will have to be a disciplinarian.

The National Hockey League club Wednesday fired coach Orland Kurtenbach and his assistant Arnie Brown after the Canucks finished with the fourth-worst record in the league and out of the playoffs for the second consecutive year.

"I felt we had the talent on the club to get 70 points," Milford said.

"Kurt was a nice guy and he wasn't the whole reason we didn't do well, but they just didn't get the job done. In professional sports, the coach is always the first to go.

"I don't think we were the best-conditioned club in the league either. Often I don't think we were ready to play back-to-back games."

The Canucks finished the season with 57 points, two points behind Colorado Rockies who wound up second in the weak Smythe Division.

Kurtenbach, 41, started with the Canucks as a player when the team came into the NHL in 1970. He was the club's captain for four years, then started his coaching career with Vancouver farm clubs in Seattle and Tulsa.

He was named the Central Hockey League's coach-of-the-year in 1975-76 while in Tulsa and was promoted to the Vancouver job on Dec. 22, 1976, when Phil Maloney was fired. Kurtenbach's record with the Canucks was 36-62-27.

He has another two years left on his present agreement with the club and might be used in another capacity, although Milford said he is free to negotiate with other NHL teams before the coaching portion of his contract ends May 31.

Brown, a 10-year NHL defenceman, was signed at the start of the 1977-78. He was expected to help groom the Canucks' young defence, but Vancouver's goals-against total increased to its second highest total ever.

Dragons Fall To Cowichan

DUNCAN — Cowichan Juniors tripped Dragons, a select high school team from England, 22-9 here Wednesday in an international exhibition rugby match.

The loss leaves the visitors with a 0-2 record on the Vancouver Island portion of their tour after compiling a 2-1 record on the Mainland.

Dragons now face Crimson Tide Juniors of the Vancouver Island Union at 5 p.m. Friday at Centennial Stadium.

MINNESOTA WILL BUILD TEAM AROUND RAUTINS

TORONTO (CP) — Leo Rautins, one of the most sought after high school basketball players ever developed in Canada, Wednesday signed a $4,700 scholarship offer from the University of Minnesota.

The talented 18-year-old St. Michael's College star, wooed by some 60 U.S. universities, will join the Gophers next season. Head coach Jim Dutcher has indicated he will build his club over the next four years around the Toronto player.

Rautins said he selected Minnesota's offer after spending several hours Tuesday with the Gophers' assitant coach, Terry Kunze.

The six-foot-seven guard on Canada's national team said two weeks ago he had narrowed his choice of scholarship offers down to three schools—Minnesota, Marquette and Syracuse. Minnesota finished second in the Big 10 Conference this year.

"I feel like a big weight—a 1,000 pounder—has been lifted off my shoulders," said Rautins, a Grade 12 student at St. Michael's. "I spent a few hours with him (Kunze). He didn't say anything different. I just made up my mind to sign."

"We're really pleased. He's a great kid," Kunze said. "He's going to be a great Gopher for the next four years."

"He's an awfully good player," Dutcher said in a telephone interview from Minneapolis. "It's rare that you see a player of his size handle and pass the ball so well. He's also an excellent shooter."

Moret Shocks Texas Mates

Roger Moret, who threatened to jump from Texas Rangers last week, stood trance-like like a statue for 45 minutes in the locker room at Arlington, Texas — holding a shower shoe in his extended hand—before Wednesday night's game with Detroit Tigers.

Teammates and reporters looked on in disbelief as the 28-year-old left-handed relief pitcher stood motionless, dressed only in his shorts and not uttering a word.

Concerned Ranger officials took Moret by ambulance to a local neuropsychiatric hospital after he was given five sedative injections.

"It is a definite catatonic state. You don't see them very often," said team physician Dr. B.J. Mykoskie.

Moret had pitched four excellent innings of relief Monday night to gain a save against New York Yankees.

After that game, Moret said he was happy with his position on the team. Last week, he said he was quitting the team because of an argument with several teammates.

The Rangers lost Wednesday night's game 3-2 to Detroit.

Meanwhile, it has been 13 years since Baltimore Orioles had a poorer start than the 0-5 record that has dropped them to the bottom of the American League's East Division.

Seattle Mariners haven't even been around for 13 months. But they are suffering a similar affliction: a five-game losing streak.

"This is a nightmare," said Orioles manager Earl Weaver after a three-run outside-the-park home run by Amos Otis and an inside-the-park shot by Darrell Porter carried Kansas City Royals to a 5-2 victory.

Seattle manager Darrell Johnson might have been thinking the same thing after watching a creditable pitching performance by Rich Honeycutt ruined by errors in a 4-3 loss to Oakland A's.

Wilke Bounces Back; Will Captain Canada

RUGBY
max low

You can't keep a good man down.

Isn't that how the old saying goes? But when you're talking about rugby and Ken Wilke, "good" is very much an understatement of the facts. He is, in fact, if not the best, at least one of the best back row forwards in Canada.

Wilke was down, all right. Less than a year ago he suffered injuries that might have kept most of us ordinary guys from walking — let alone playing rugby. When the tendons in his lower right leg were severed, many believed Ken Wilke wouldn't play again.

Not only is he playing again this season for his club — James Bay Athletic Association — but Ken is also back in the representative lineup for the Island's Crimson Tide and for British Columbia, and he has just capped a fine recovery year by being named to captain Canada against the United States.

"I'm just really glad I can still play," Wilke says shrugging off his remarkable comeback. "I had a bit of trouble with my foot at first, but everything still works," he adds with a grin, "and a good way to make sure every part of your body does work is to play rugby."

When Wilke leads his country into the annual Test match against the States in Baltimore on May 28, it will be his third time up as national captain. He led Canada against Wales in 1973 and against the British glamor club, Barbarians, in 1976. He was so impressive in that last match the visitors made him an honorary Barbarian. He has also been a member of touring teams three times to Britain and once to South America.

Born in Grande Prairie, Alberta, Ken Wilke started his rugby career in Grade 12 at St. Michael's University School in 1965.

His entrance into club rugby was strange to say the least.

"I went out to what I thought was a Castaways practice night and it turned out to be Oak Bay," Ken says with a laugh. "So I played for the Wanderers for a while and later for Castaways and for the UVic Vikings."

Then two years ago Wilke did something for which he's often been criticized: he joined the already strong James Bay organization.

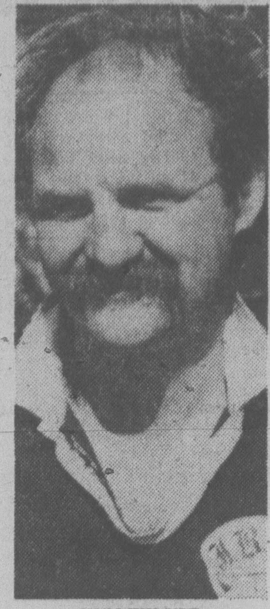
"I did that because they were playing the serious type of rugby that I needed to play to improve," he explains. "I went there because everybody trains hard, they all have common goals and they're really a great group of people — besides that, they asked me!"

While at UVic, Wilke was an education student but decided, after a short trial, teaching just wasn't for him. He works for the city at the moment but hopes to get into the real estate business and, in fact, is sitting his exams this week.

And what makes Ken Wilke such a great back row forward and the choice for Canadian captain?

"There's probably no one in the country who's better at understanding the game, and capable of making the decisions that have to be made," explains Canada's former coaching co-ordinator Don Burgess.

"Like most of the James Bay players, Wilke's got built-in aggression and he also has a bird-dog nose for the ball. Well, when you've got a player like that, you've got a jewel in the game."



KEN WILKIE
. . . remarkable recovery

And how long will the jewel keep shining?

Well, he's six foot two and at 30 is a fit 195 pounds and can't see any end in sight. He doesn't even have a favorite performance on the field he likes to remember.

"I remember all the games because I like playing rugby so much," he says with a smile.

"If I live to be 70, I guess I'll play for the Over 70s . . .

Sonics Exploit Jabbar's Trouble

Gus Williams scored 23 points and Seattle SuperSonics took advantage of Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's foul trouble to pull away in the fourth period for a 102-90 victory over Los Angeles Lakers in the first game of their best-of-three National Basketball Association playoff series Wednesday night at Seattle.

Abdul-Jabbar, who finished with a game-high 26 points, went to the bench with 11:30 left in the game after being whistled for his fifth personal foul with Seattle ahead 73-68.

When Abdul-Jabbar returned five minutes later, the Lakers were down 83-74. Sonics rookie forward Jack Sikma, who scored 13 points, hit a basket to give Seattle its biggest lead of the night, 87-76, with 5:42 left.

Marvin Webster and Fred Brown added 19 points apiece for the Sonics.

Elsewhere, the New York Knicks demonstrated that home-court advantage doesn't mean a thing if the visiting team is hitting 61 percent of its shots.

That's the formula the Knicks used to beat Cleveland Cavaliers 132-114 at Richfield, Ohio, in the opener of their first-round series.

"That was a great ball game, one of the best this team has played all season long," said coach Willis Reed after enjoying his team's explosive offensive display that featured 41 points by centre Bob McAdoo and 16 apiece by Earl Monroe and Spencer Haywood.

"When the shots fall," added Reed, "a lot of things work."

In another series opener, Washington Bullets shot down Atlanta Hawks 103-94.

Liverpool Gains European Cup Final

By Reuter

Defending titleholder Liverpool qualified Wednesday to meet Belgian champion Bruges in the final of the European Cup soccer series in London on May 10.

Liverpool, playing at home, earned the right to defend its crown in its own country by beating Borussia Moenchengladbach of West Germany 3-0 in the second leg of their semi-final match.

Goals by Ray Kennedy and Kenny Dalglish wiped out Liverpool's 2-1 away setback. Then shortly after halftime Jimmy Case made the aggregate 4-2. Borussia lost 3-1 to Liverpool in the final last year.

In Belgium, Juventus could not cling to the 1-0 lead over Bruges the Italian club brought from Turin in the first match, losing 2-0 in the second leg.

Bastijns' goal made it 1-1 over all and, in extra time, team-mate Vandereycken scored the goal which knocked out the elite Italian squad which includes the core of the national team.

Belgium had a second triumph in Anderlechts 2-0 win over Twente Enschede of the Netherlands. That moved Anderlecht to the final of the Cup Winners' Cup for the third year in a row.

Goals by two Dutch 1974 World Cup stars, celebrating their nomination Tuesday to their country's 1978 World Cup team, torpedoed their compatriots.

Arie Haan scored on the half hour and Rob Rensebrink, from the penalty spot, made it 2-0 after the break.

Dutch disappointment at the fate of Twente was cushioned by the success of their unbeaten league champion, rSV Eindhoven, in qualifying for the UEFA Cup final.

Polish Star Joins Sting

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Sting of the North American Soccer League have signed Robert Gadocha, a world class player from the Polish national team, to a two-year contract.

Gadocha, 32, led the Polish national team to third place in the 1974 World Cup. The former Polish team captain was voted that year as the best left winger in the world.

Major Hockey Mark to Tardif

HARTFORD, Conn. (CP) — Left winger Marc Tardif of Quebec Nordiques led the World Hockey Association in goals and total points to win his second Hunter Trophy in three years, the league announced Wednesday.

Tardif's point total of 154 (65 goals, 89 assists) set a major league regular-season point record, surpassing Phil Esposito's total of 152 established in 1970-71 with Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League.

It is the third consecutive year that a member of the Nordiques has won the Hunter Trophy. Right winger Real Cloutier won the trophy last year and finished second this season with 129 points.

New England's goaltending tandem of Al Smith and Louie Levasseur were the stingiest netminders in the league to win the Ben Hatskin Trophy.

Smith led the individual goaltending with a 3.22 goals-against average. Levasseur and Winnipeg's Joe Daley and Gary Bromley finished with matching 3.30 averages.

Marking the first time in league history that the season average has been more than 8,000, the 1977-78 attendance for each game increased 6.1 per cent over 1976-77. A total of 2,860,211 attended WHA games during the 1977-78 season for an average of 8,267. Edmonton Oilers led the list, drawing 10,235 a game.

The playoffs begin Friday night with Birmingham Bulls visiting the Jets and the Oilers playing the Whalers in Springfield, opening best-of-seven quarter-final rounds.

The Nordiques open their series ithe two teams with the lowest regular-season standing will meet in a best-of-seven semi-final, while the survivor with the highest regular-season standing will go directly to the final.

Eskimos Sign Rose Bowl Hero

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Eskimos of the Canadian Football League fired the first shot in their anticipated battle of quarterbacks this season when they announced Wednesday the signing of Warren Moon, Rose Bowl hero of University of Washington Huskies.

Moon, 21, will compete with veterans Tom Wilkinson and Bruce Lemmerman for the starting quarterback job this season.

Moon was selected most valuable player in the Rose Bowl after scoring two touchdowns and passing for a third in a victory over the highly-favored University of Michigan Wolverines.

Moon said he elected to sign with the Eskimos because he believed a black quarterback has a better chance to start in Canada than in the National Football League. The NFL draft is scheduled in about two weeks.

"I just had to be realistic about it," said Moon, who stands six-feet-two and considers his scrambling style perfectly adapted to the CFL.

"Color has a lot to do with it in the States. Besides, the style of play they (the Eskimos) run up here would suit me.

Moon said he had been tested by Los Angeles Rams, Pittsurgh Steelers, Buffalo Bills, New Orleans Saints, New England Patriots and Denver Broncos before deciding to come to Canada. He was confident he would be drafted high by an NFL team but was not sure he would be selected as a quarterback.

"I feel I have the ability to play drop-back quarterback as they do in the NFL, but I am a black quarterback and I want to play."

Edmonton general manager Norm Kimball and Edmonton head coach Hugh Campbell said they analyzed all available quarterbacks in the United States and Canada before determining Moon was at the top of their list.

Getting a CB? Get a licence too.

It's illegal to operate a CB radio without a licence. So if your CB dealer doesn't give you a licence application, write us and we'll send you one. We'll also give you a booklet which describes the rules and etiquette of the airways.

All you do is complete the application. Attach a cheque or money order for $13.50. Then mail or take it to your nearest Department of Communications office.

While you're waiting for your licence, you are allowed to transmit using a temporary permit. You receive your permit with your application.

CB buyer beware! Some CBs for sale in Canada cannot be licensed because they don't meet our standards. All new CB sets must have a Department of Communications type-approval number. New 23 channel units must also have a two-part serial number label. Attach one part to your licence application. CB sets that are licensed can have their licences renewed.

WHITACRE JOINS 'CAPS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Whitecaps of the North American Soccer League announced Wednesday they have hired Fred Whitacre, former general manager of the Vancouver Canadians of the Pacific Coast baseball league, to become Whitecaps' assistant general manager.

Whitacre, who came to Vancouver from Hawaii to manage Vancouver's new professional baseball franchise, left the Canadians only eight days ago after a dispute with owner Harry Ornest.

Whitecaps said Whitacre will be responsible for internal operations of the club off the field.

His areas of expertise will include sports marketing and promotion.

SAW MARKS PROVE EARLY SETTLEMENT

KELOWNA (CP) — The discovery and subsequent testing of a fossilized elk antler show that humans occupied the Okanagan Valley in about 250 B.C., Ursula Surtees, curator of the Kelowna Centennial Museum, said today.

The antler bears signs of human workings in the form of saw marks and radio carbon tests performed in New Jersey showed its age to be within 90 years each way of 2,225 years.

The fossil was found by Norma Wade when she was raking the beach near her home two years ago. Mrs. Wade gave the antler to Mrs. Surtees, who sent it to the Museum of Natural Sciences in Ottawa.

The wapiti elk antler is about 10 inches long and about two inches thick.

PWA Safety Verified

VANCOUVER (CP) — Safety standards are not being compromised by permitting Pacific Western Airlines to operate with fewer flight attendants, the ministry of transport said Wednesday.

On Tuesday, Len Guy, secretary-treasurer of the British Columbia Federation of Labor, said the ministry was strike-breaking by allowing PWA to operate Boeing 737s with two attendants instead of the required three.

Guy said three attendants are necessary because the aircraft has three emergency doors.

"PWA applied to operate with reduced passenger loads," said ministry spokesman Craig Fraser-Lee.

He said the airline normally operated with 95 to 113 passengers and now is operating with no more than 80. These passengers are required to sit in the front 15 rows of the aircraft.

"There is still the same basic ratio of passengers to flight attendants and it falls in the limitations of air navigation orders."

Fraser-Lee said the matter of the third door is irrelevant.

"Guy is not an expert in aviation. Only two attendants are required when the airline flies mixed passenger-cargo loads."

b.c. briefs

Milfoil Weed May Kill Fish

VERNON (CP) — A provincial biologist said Tuesday that Eurasian milfoil weed could ultimately destroy some fish species in the Okanagan lakes system.

Peter Scales, public information officer for the British Columbia aquatic plant management program, told a meeting held to discuss use of the herbicide 2,4-D against milfoil that danger to some species of fish would come about when the weed decayed.

Scales said that when the weed decays the nutrient goes into the water, removes the oxygen and "leads to rapid aging of the lake."

Gun Trial Set

VANCOUVER (CP) — Louis Greyeyes, 24, of Vancouver was committed Tuesday for trial on charges of armed robbery and violating the federal government's new gun control legislation.

In the first case of its kind in Vancouver, Greyeyes is charged under the new Criminal Code section of using a firearm in the commission of an indictable offence and using a firearm in flight after committing an indictable offence.

Employee Guilty

VANCOUVER (CP) — A British Columbia Telephone Co. employee pleaded guilty Wednesday to a false pretenses charge in connection with the theft of 130 cases of the company's billing forms during last winter's labor dispute.

Graeme Apps, 28, of Vancouver will be sentenced April 26.

The incident occurred last November and involved the collection of $3,200 worth of business forms from a Vancouver company. The business form company received a phone call saying someone would be around to pick up the forms and later Apps appeared with a rented truck and collected the forms, court was told.

MAYOR GETS OFFICIAL TRANSPORT

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council voted unanimously Tuesday in favor of a $3,000 annual fund for the lease of an "adequate" car for Mayor Jack Volrich.

Since he has been mayor, Volrich told council he has had to make do with his own car, taxis and even an old police car.

"It didn't even have a handle on the door," he said.

Judge Delays Ruling On Indian Hydro Tax

VANCOUVER (CP) — Justice J. A. Macdonald reserved decision Tuesday on an application by Lillian Brown, of Skidegate, for a declaration that the province of British Columbia is unlawfully collecting the provincial sales tax when the tax is included in B.C. Hydro bills sent to native Indians living on reserves.

Mrs. Brown also wants the return, with interest, of all taxes collected by the Crown corporation from B.C.'s approximately 50,000 registered Indians.

Mrs. Brown claims she is being taxed unjustly and unconstitutionally because of her Indian status under the Indian Act.

Her lawyer, David Mossop, argued that electricity is personal property, pointing to Section 87 of the act which says that the personal property of an Indian or an Indian band is exempt from taxation.

Peter Leask, representing the attorney-general's ministry, said the province's position is that the disputed Hydro billing is not a tax on personal property or in respect of personal property.

Leask said it is a sales tax on a transaction — a credit arrangement where it made no difference at what point the electricity was received by a household.

TAX EVASION CHARGES LAID

VANCOUVER (CP) — Major Singh Gill, Pardaman Singh Hundal and Harkishan Singh Sandhu, all of Vancouver, have been charged under the Income Tax Act following what the federal government calls a widespread tax-evasion scheme which may have cost Canadian taxpayers $1.7 million.

The income tax department said Tuesday that an examination of 1,400 tax returns resulted in assessing $900,000 in additional taxes, including $175,000 in fines.

The department said it now is examining an additional 2,500 returns and expects to levy up to $1 million more in taxes.

The scheme involved claims for exemptions for non-resident dependents, the department said.

Many taxpayers used receipt copies of bank drafts showing money transfers to overseas dependents, but the department investigation showed these drafts were not sent overseas, but were cashed in Canada by the purchasers.

Gill was scheduled to appear in provincial court today and Hundal and Sandhu on June 4.

Social Workers Blast Gov.'t Hiring Policies

VANCOUVER (CP) — The ministry of human resources is placing staff in jobs they are not qualified to handle, Bob Foulis, a spokesman for the Associated Professional Social Workers of British Columbia, said Tuesday.

Foulis said his group wants to see a licence for professional social workers and a university degree as a requirement for doing social work.

He said B.C. has a poor reputation when it comes to academic standing, on-the-job training and supervision of its human resources staff.

The professional association is concerned about the people, under severe stress, who walk into human resources offices for help with family problems, Foulis said.

"Those people need help from people. . .who have good technical, clinical skills," Foulis said. "It's just not good enough to have well-intentioned people."

The group is particularly worried about the ministry's hiring of a new classification of social services staff, family support workers.

Referring to an advertisement for a child care counsellor, requiring a high school degree and "related experience," Foulis said: "They're not going to have the appropriate supervision. Nor are they going to have the appropriate skills."

Foulis said representatives of his group are meeting next week to discuss improvements to the legislation.

Cut Income Taxes, Chretien Told

OTTAWA (CP) — Lower personal income taxes are needed in addition to Monday night's budget measures to strengthen the economy, opposition critics told Finance Minister Jean Chretien Wednesday.

As a scheduled six-day budget debate opened, both the Progressive Conservatives and the New Democrats moved non-confidence motions on the government's handling of the economy.

Last week, Prime Minister Trudeau warned that if the opposition is "making politics" out of the budget, he may cut debate short by dissolving Parliament and calling a general election.

The NDP motion, by finance critic Max Saltsman, comes up for a vote Thursday night. It calls for income tax cuts directed to lower-income Canadians and tax credits for those with incomes so low they are not taxable.

Sinclair Stevens, Progressive Conservatives' finance critic, called for a permanent $2 billion personal income tax cut aimed at low- and middle-income earners.

The budget offered Monday shows the government's failure to control the economy because it does not curtail federal spending, Stevens claimed.

In a motion that comes up for a Commons vote Monday night, Stevens says a deal for provinces to temporarily reduce sales taxes will not affect high unemployment or inflation, stimulate real growth, reduce the deficit or stabilize the plunging dollar.

The main feature of Monday's budget was an arrangement for a temporary two or three percentage point drop in provincial sales taxes in return for federal money to make up revenue losses.

In a wide-ranging attack, Stevens said the sales tax cuts will only cause consumers to telescope purchases, speeding up planned major purchases to get the benefit of the tax reductions. After the cuts end, consumer buying will dry up.

A permanent tax cut, up to $300 a year for lower-income people, is needed to restore consumer confidence, he said. If the income tax reduction is big enough and permanent, it will generate enough demand to prevent the estimated $11 billion deficit from rising, he maintained.

The Progressive Conservatives were told by two consulting groups that a $2 billion income tax reduction would stimulate between $7½ billion and $8 billion more of output, Stevens said.

If the Conservatives had presented a budget, it would also have included a three-year program for cutting federal spending by $2 billion. Stevens said this could be achieved by slashing departments' operating costs and freezing civil service hiring.

Echoing comments earlier this week by NDP Leader Ed Broadbent, Stevens said he supported federal investment to aid fishermen, build up Western grain handling operations, add public transit in Toronto and other centres and build sewage treatment plants in cities like Montreal.

A permanent tax cut, putting dollars in consumer pockets, is greatly needed in addition to such half measures as the temporary sales tax reductions, he said. Consumer spending makes up about 60 per cent of national output, Stevens noted.

Saltsman said he felt Stevens' proposals for across-the-board income tax cuts were dishonest and irresponsible.

"Who wouldn't like permanent tax cuts?," he asked. "But they would be made at the expense of those who look to the government for the services they need."

Instead, the NDP wants selective income tax cuts aimed at lower-income earners, making them an income redistribution scheme.

Any broader cuts would not work. "Tax cuts in the past have done little or no good because they have just gone into more saving," he said.

"If the government's budget is a prescription for disaster, the Conservative suggestions are a double prescription for disaster," Saltsman added, particularly plans for freezing civil service hiring.

A hiring freeze represents pandering by Stevens to public disenchantment with government spending, Saltsman claimed. It would only reduce job opportunities for young people.

CONTROL COMPANIES, MPs URGE

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons public accounts committee urged changes in legislation Wednesday to improve Parliamentary control over the growing array of government-owned companies.

In its second report to the House on Crown corporations, the committee says the current set-up allows the spending of large amounts of public money "without adequate accountability to Parliament and the government."

Ron Huntington (PC—Capilano), the chairman of the watchdog committee on government spending, said the study confirmed MP's fears that they have little control over the operations of such companies.

Stripper Fined

BRISBANE (AP) — Sandra Marie Purcell, a 30-year-old part-time model sentenced to 14 days in jail for stripping naked at a party, won her court appeal Wednesday against the severity of the sentence. District Court Chairman Judge Grant Taylor instead fined Mrs. Purcell $75.

TELESAT COST UP BY $13M

OTTAWA (CP) — Communications Minister Jeanne Sauve said Wednesday she has approved Telesat Canada's proposed multi-million dollar contract for three new communications satellites.

The contract paves the way for increased jobs in the country's aerospace industry but at a cost to Telesat, half government-owned, of about $13 million more than originally expected.

The contract, to be signed Friday, is with Hughes Aircraft Co. of the U.S. because the Canadian space industry is not capable of completely building the type of satellite Telesat wanted.

But Mrs. Sauve said the contract calls for about $20 million worth of work on the new satellites to be done on this side of the border, an increase from original contract proposals.

Estimates for the total cost of the satellites, known as the Anik C series, have ranged as high as $69 million in U.S. funds. The Canadian dollar has been running at about 12 per cent lower than the U.S. dollar.

But Telesat and communications department officials have refused to confirm the estimates or their breakdown until after the contract has been signed.

RCMP BUGGED ALBERTA MOST

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCMP was bugging more people in Alberta during the War Measures Act than in Quebec, figures placed before a royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing indicated Wednesday.

The figures were taken from Geographical charts outlining so-called major and minor cases of electronic surveillance by the RCMP between 1963 and 1974.

The charts, which cover electronic activities of the RCMP criminal investigation branch but not the RCMP security service, are not complete.

RCMP Assistant Commissioner T. S. Venner told the commission that because RCMP policy said criminal investigators were not to use wiretaps during that period, many wiretaps — carried out unofficially — weren't reported to RCMP headquarters.

In the cases that were, however, Alberta ranked third behind RCMP divisions in Toronto and Vancouver.

Mr. Justice David C. McDonald, the commission chairman, asked why there were 465 minor cases in Alberta during the 11-year period against only 194 in Manitoba.

"In a lot of cases, it just boils down to the preference of the investigator," Venner replied.

Open Mail 'Breaks Law'

OTTAWA (CP) — Human rights commissioner Gordon Fairweather warned MPs Wednesday about public concern that proposed mail-opening legislation will violate privacy guarantees in the new human rights act.

Fairweather, head of the Canadian Human Rights Commission and a former Progressive Conservative MP, made the statement in a written note to MPs when he appeared before the Commons justice committee.

Asked by committee chairman Mark MacGuigan (L—Windsor Walkerville) for further comment, Fairweather replied "I want to be very careful." Since the legislation is still being considered by Parliament it "would be somewhat arrogant for us (the commission) to state a view."

In the mail-opening legislation, the government proposes to empower police to open an individual's private mail during investigations of suspected narcotics offences, subversion and other security-related lawbreaking.

A royal commission into RCMP activities has found that police officers have been illegally opening private mail for about 40 years.

The Human Rights Act limits access to personal information by government and its agencies to the place and purpose it was intended for and grants individuals the right to see what information the government has about them. There are exceptions to these general rules.

Privacy commissioner Inger Hansen, who deals with complaints the government has unjustifiably denied an individual access to his personal files, said Fairweather gave the message to MPs after someone outside Parliament "solicited our support to oppose the bill."

15% Limit Put On Tax Skim

By KEN POLE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Fly-by-night operators who offer instant cash to people who don't want to wait for their income tax refunds are the target of a crackdown unveiled Tuesday by the federal government.

Consumer Affairs Minister Warren Allmand, after introducing the proposed legislation in the House of Commons, told reporters that the tax discounters would be limited to 15 per cent of the total refunding, including interest and other charges. Violaters would be liable to fines of up to $25,000.

Allmand said the federal move is in response to a unanimous appeal by his 10 provincial counterparts last month because their own rules governing tax discounting firms were being challenged on constitutional grounds.

Allmand described how a check of the situation in Alberta, where the discounters are required to report their haul to the provincial government, uncovered interest rates of as high as 12,000 per cent. The average was around 840 per cent.

The annual take in recent years has been estimated at $26 million to $30 million, before a number of provinces imposed their own ceilings, the very ones in danger of being challenged.

British Columbia has a ceiling of 15 per cent on the amount the discounters can skim from a refund.

Canadian Lack of Hustle Criticized

By KEN POLE
Times Ottawa Bureau

MONTREAL — A common criticism of Canadian businessmen, recently endorsed by none other than Prime Minister Trudeau, is that their lack of international "hustle" is one reason Canada's balance of trade in manufactured goods is as bleak as it is.

Time and again, businessmen have been accused of doing little or no research into market potential and even of turning out promising products and then complacently hoping these goods will sell themselves.

The problem of "hustle," or product promotion as it more properly might be called, came up several times Wednesday at a $175-a-head meeting of about 200 business and government representatives sponsored by the Conference Board in Canada.

R. A. Kilpatrick of Ottawa, who directs the federal government's trade commissioners abroad, said the tendency has been for most Canadians to take for granted this country's reputation as one of the great trading nations of the world.

"Fewer, however, realize to what extent their economic well-being is directly dependent on our performance in overseas markets," he said, explaining that 25 per cent of Canada's Gross National Product (the value of a goods and services produced annually) depends on exports. This is compared with only seven per cent for the U.S. and barely 15 per cent for European Economic Community members.

But this very dependence on exports works against Canada by making it vulnerable to sharp swings in the world economy.

Kilpatrick said that while many Canadian firms use the services of 240 trade commissioners and 170 locally-engaged commercial officers in 65 countries as well as other services such as cost-sharing programs available in Ottawa, he would welcome even more.

A. G. McDonald, Alberta's deputy minister of business development, touched briefly on promotion while commenting on the ongoing negotiations on the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade that may result in more favorable tariffs.

"Opening the door to a market does not put one inside," he said. "Having an internationally-competitive product does not alter the necessity of exposing and selling it through a comprehensive and dynamic marketing strategy."

Civil Service Computer Programmed for Liberals

OTTAWA (CP) — Pierre Trudeau's Liberal administration has converted the publicly-financed prime minister's office into a sophisticated re-election machine as the next campaign approaches.

A million-dollar computer, owned by a government department and nestled in a basement room of Trudeau's stone Langevin Block office across the street from Parliament Hill, is geared for use against campaign trail attacks by opposition parties.

Several key aides on Trudeau's 86-member staff — their salaries are paid by public funds, not the Liberal party — are spending the bulk of their time now acting as election advance men or campaign strategists. One is being promoted as a Liberal party candidate.

Longstanding requests for Trudeau interviews are being granted on a selected basis to large circulation magazines, such as MacLeans, and television networks.

Political debts are being paid with Trudeau's power to make appointments to the Senate, government agencies, commissions and boards. The device is also being used to put potential candidates for other parties on ice.

Spokesmen for Opposition Leader Joe Clark and NDP Leader Ed Broadbent say many of the actions, including Trudeau's use of government jets for pre-election political forays, represent a serious abuse of public money and power.

They give the governing party an unfair advantage over its opponents as Trudeau prepares for his fourth re-election attempt.

A Broadbent spokesman said he is particularly upset with the planned use of the publicly-owned Privy Council Office computer as a campaign tool.

But a Trudeau aide said he sees nothing wrong with the plan to use the machine, now programmed with everything from cabinet studies on labor policy to press reports on Clark's last haircut.

"It's a prerequisite of government," said the spokesman.

If the prime minister was attacked during a campaign by Clark or Broadbent, "he has a right to go back for a reply."

At the same time, Trudeau's aide said the Liberal party as such will not have access to the computer, and that it will not be used to plot travel and other arrangements during the campaign.

The computer now is used to store information on cabinet documents, press reports, legislation and published government and opposition party policies. It would be used "for government purposes" during the campaign.

If Broadbent, for instance, said the government has done nothing to help the working men, the machine "can churn out everything on labor policy."

'Loose Lips' Horner

OTTAWA (CP)—Conservative MPs have a new nickname for their former colleague Jack Horner, who now is federal industry minister: Loose Lips.

In a rowdy series of partisan exchanges in the Commons Wednesday, John Crosbie (PC—St. John's West) warned Prime Minister Trudeau that Loose Lips Horner is doing untold harm to the government by making statements on financial matters which contradict the government's policy.

Crosbie and James McGrath (PC—St. John's East) were asking whether Horner stated government policy when he said in a CTV interview Tuesday night the Canadian dollar should be pegged at 90 cents U.S.

Both Trudeau and Finance Minister Jean Chretien reiterated the government's policy is to allow the dollar to find its own level on the world money markets.

Clark Shows Form

OTTAWA (CP) — Insulting the Liberals and wooing the voters, Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark gave a preview Wednesday night of the fighting words he will take into a federal election campaign many expect will begin this month.

About 500 Conservatives attending a fund-raising dinner paid $125 each to dine on chicken Kiev and hear Clark call the Liberals "the worst government in the history of Canada."

The audience, which responded with four standing ovations and shouts of "go Joe, go Joe," included several senators and MPs.

Lincoln Alexander, MP for Hamilton West, summed up the mood of his colleagues anticipating a June election when he said: "I'm ready, mean, tough and out to destroy Grits."

Also in the audience were about 25 Conservative candidates from across the country who are attending a three-day "candidates' school" — getting briefed on party policy and campaign strategy.

'Vote Gimmick' Flayed

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has published a newspaper-style publicity handout on its spending plans which the opposition denounced Wednesday as a wasteful election gimmick paid for by the taxpayer.

And the figures in the newssheet, based on estimates circulated seven weeks ago in glossy booklet form, are already out of date.

Progressive Conservative G.I. Smith, former premier of Nova Scotia, complained in the Senate that the Liberal government is wasting $44,000 in public funds on a publication designed to flatter its financial operations in advance of an expected federal election. The 300,000 copies of the sheet will be free in federal buildings across the country.

Simultaneously in the Commons, Robert Andras, president of the treasury board, said the government is reducing by almost one-quarter its contingency fund for supplementary spending during the fiscal year that opened April 1.

This bookkeeping move was described as "flimflam" by the opposition.

The cushion fund, earmarked for additional costs that crop up every year as supplementary spending estimates, is reduced by $350 million from the $1.55 billion earmarked by Andras in February.

This leaves the government with a commitment to spend no more than $1.2 billion this fiscal year on supplementary spending, compared with more than $3 billion spent this way in the year just ended.

Over-all, the change reduces the treasury board spending ceiling for this year to $48.45 billion from the $48.8 billion forecast in February, an increase of almost 10 per cent from last year. Other transactions listed in the federal budget Monday night raise the forecast outlays from national accounts to $52.1 billion, an increase of almost 12 per cent.

The government newssheet quotes Andras saying the increase in spending is really about 3.5 per cent if cost inflation is discounted.

The reduction in the fund for supplementary spending, Andras said, is designed to help cover the cost of compensating the provinces for short-term cuts in their retail sales taxes announced in Monday's budget.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 45-year-old Sidney woman, who told Judge Harold Alder in provincial court Wednesday she was blinded and confused by a Dec. 15 police roadblock and that two Saanich officers were curt and oblivious to her handicap, was convicted of impaired driving and refusing a breath test demand.

Dorothea Griffiths, 2316 Amelia, was fined $300 for the impaired driving and $100 on the refusal to take the test.

Alder said the difficulty often was that impairment was not limited to illegal things and could be something physical, as it was in this case. Mrs. Griffiths told the court she had a polio attack in 1953 which left her with difficulty walking.

Alder ruled that the only explanation was that Mrs. Griffiths had too much to drink and it suddenly hit her and that she did not complete the breath test as ordered.

He said she came over the crest of a hill on the Pat Bay Highway near Elk Lake, came to an emergency which was faced by some 100 other cars and not only ran over flares, but became confused and almost hit constables Neil McKinley and Geoff Wilde, as well as coming within 25 feet of a person lying on the pavement.

She testified she had a glass of wine with dinner and a liqueur afterwards that evening. She then went to the senior NCOs' and officers' mess at Bay Street Armoury where she had a total of two, one-ounce drinks of white rum.

On her way home, she encountered "a maze of lights, confusion" near Elk Lake.

She testified an officer brusquely told her to get out of the car, but she refused because the pavement was wet and she wasn't wearing shoes because of her handicap. She said she was pulled out of the car and escorted to a police van. The two officers appeared angry, warned her about being uncooperative and placed her in the van, despite her telling them to leave her alone for a minute so that she could enter the vehicle on her own.

"They pushed me around physically," she said, "I was very confused but I couldn't physically resist."

At the Saanich police station, she was physically taken down stairs and then handcuffed to a chair, she said.

Mrs. Griffiths said she did blow into the breathalyzer and that one officer told her it registered .04. But the other officer said it wasn't good enough, she continued, and, after three tries, angrily threw down his pen and said, "Aw forget it, you're not trying."

She acknowledged that she refused to sign an appearance notice because "I didn't feel it was right to sign anything until I had someone tell me it was all right."

Her brother, Ray Wilson, of 1900 Doney, testified he was following his sister from Bay Street but lost her near the Royal Oak hill.

Wilson, who was a member of the RCMP for 20 years, said he also came upon a massive bank of lights including two police vehicles with headlights on facing northbound traffic in the wrong lane. Wilson said he spotted his sister's car off to the left just as an officer came out of the headlight glare and waved him on.

He said he went to the police station to pick up his sister when McKinley sarcastically greeted him with the question, "Do you think you can handle her by yourself?"

He said he then drove his sister to Sidney RCMP detachment where a request for a breath test was refused.

He then suggested to Mrs. Griffiths that she get a blood sample and she stated that she phoned Rest Haven hospital where a nurse eventually told her it was not possible because her physician was not available and no arrangements could be made at that hour.

In his summation, defence lawyer Jeffrey Green said it was unfortunate police took the approach they did and that the two officers admitted during the trial they were angry.

"I think they may have gone too far in this case in the way they treated Mrs. Griffiths," he said.

He said the officers weren't reasonable and conducted themselves in a shocking manner.

Also fined for drinking-driving were Ezra Leah Roodenburg, 896 Hyacinth, $500; Walter Philip Quaite, 20, of 19 Midwood, $500; John Daniel Hennessey, 24, of 2814 Sooke, $500; Ian Bruce Anderson, 17, of 1319 Justine Place, $300; and Brenda Nancy White, 32, of 870 Tolmie, $200.

In addition, Hennessey was fined $250 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident and Mrs. White was ordered to perform 75 hours of community service work.

25 MORE YEARS EATING RIGHT?

WILMINGTON, Ohio (UPI) — Proper nutritional practices could add up to 25 years of healthy living to the average American life, according to Nobel Prize laureate and nutrition expert Linus Pauling.

"Supplementing the diet with vitamins and minerals, cutting out snacks and in-between meals, and eating breakfast could do wonders," Pauling said in an interview at Wilmington College.

"The proper intake of vitamin C, for example, could add up to 16 years to our life span," added Pauling, winner of the 1954 Nobel Prize in chemistry and the 1962 Nobel Peace Prize.

Pauling said a proper dose of vitamin C is 1,000 milligrams a day. He himself takes 10,000 milligrams daily.

He praised school systems that have opted to stop selling junk foods in cafeterias in favor of more nutritional items.

Pauling addressed 600 persons in Boyd Auditorium at the college after receiving an honorary doctor of human reconstruction degree.

Accept Growing Old, Aging Told

TORONTO (CP) — A former executive director of the Ontario Society of Aging says elderly people have a responsibility to accept the fact that they are growing old.

Jean Good, 76, who retired from the society 16 years ago, said at a seminar for elderly people that "we hear a great deal of talk about the rights and privileges of old people, but we also have responsibilities."

Among the responsibilities are striving for good citizenship and the acceptance of aging, she said.

The advantages of old age include freedom to be one's self and time to learn new things and develop new attitudes, she said.

Harold Whitley, a retired school board inspector, said the false idea that persons' usefulness ends when they reach 65 is being discarded.

He said elderly people lose some of the best years of their lives because of the mandatory retirement age and that he hopes there eventually will be no mandatory retirement age.

SLOWLY STARVING? TRY INSTANT MUFFIN

Mary Moore

To order the Mary Moore Cookbook send cheque for $13 payable to Mary Moore, 32 Churchill Avenue, Hamilton, Ont., L9A 1J5. Delivery date will be late spring, 1978.

Late on a Saturday evening I returned from Florida and the cupboard was bare.

But wait a minute — not the freezer. Carefully wrapped in foil was a muffin with a sign on it "Nutritious Muffin. Taste on return. Maureen."

I was starved. It was manna from heaven. I turned up the heat, made instant coffee with instant cream and ate that muffin and drank the coffee with a big sweater on sitting on the corner of my desk, which was piled with mail.

I want you to enjoy these muffins as much as I did.

NUTRITIOUS MUFFINS
(18 to 20 large)

1 16-oz. can 2% evaporated milk (2 cups)
¾ cup all bran
½ cup rolled oats
½ cup rye flakes (substitute rolled oats if you can not find rye flakes)
1 cup brown sugar
1 cup all-purpose flour
¼ cup graham or whole wheat flour
¼ cup wheat germ
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
1¾ teaspoons salt
2 cups raisins
½ cup sunflower seeds (do not omit)
½ cup oil
2 large eggs (or 4 yolks)
2 teaspoons vanilla
sesame seeds (see below)

In bowl combine the milk, all bran, rolled oats and rye flakes and let soak until the dry ingredients are ready.

In a large bowl combine the sugar, flours, wheat germ, baking powder, baking soda, salt, raisins and sunflower seeds.

Add the oil, eggs (or egg yolks) and vanilla to the wet oats mixture then pour all into dry ingredients. Mix only enough to make sure all is moistened. Spoon into large paper-cupcake-lined muffin tins. Spoon batter in to ⅞ fill. Sprinkle tops carefully but generously with sesame seeds — at least ¼ teaspoon each. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 20 to 25 minutes. Cool on cake racks. Freeze well if stored in plastic bags.

SYDNEY (Reuter) — Under sponsorship of the World Health Organization, universities are beginning the first human trials of a nasal spray contraceptive. # Excessive Garnishes Gone

craig claiborne

One of the characteristics of la nouvelle cuisine, the cooking as practised by the younger generation of cooks who now rule the great kitchens of France, is an absence of the superfluous garnishes that an older generation of chefs felt essential to their art.

Gone are the excesses of Duchess potatoes used to border the silver serving dishes, the dazzling floral displays in wax and the nonsensical puff-pastry crescents.

Some garnishes can be elegant and practical as well as delicious; the presentation of food remains an important element in good gastronomy. Molded vegetables are an example of garnishes in good taste, which please the eye as well as the palate.

Almost any vegetable can be baked in a timbale or other mold, and a few are listed here.

SPINACH AND MUSHROOM TIMBALES

1¼ pounds fresh spinach
salt
2 tablespoons butter
½ cup finely chopped onion
½ pound thinly sliced mushrooms freshly ground pepper
¼ teaspoon grated nutmeg
½ cup heavy cream
2 eggs
2 egg yolks

1. Preheat oven to 400 degrees.

2. Pick over the spinach and remove and discard any tough stems and blemished leaves. Drop spinach into boiling water with salt to taste. Simmer about three minutes. Drain and let cool. When cool enough to handle, squeeze between the palms to extract excess moisture. Measure. There should be about one cup. Chop the spinach coarsely.

3. Heat the butter in a large saucepan and add onion. Cook until wilted, stirring often. Add the mushrooms and pepper to taste. Cook until mushrooms are wilted. Add the spinach and cook about two minutes. Add the nutmeg.

4. Combine the cream with eggs and yolks and beat with a fork until well blended.

5. Butter four half-cup small baking molds and add equal amounts of the mixture. Place the molds in a shallow pan filled with about half an inch of boiling water. Bring to the boil on top of the stove and place in the oven. Bake 15 minutes. Unmold.

Yield: Four servings.

RATATOUILLE EN TIMBALES
(Ratatouille in timbale molds)

1 eggplant, about ¾ pound
1 or 2 zucchini, about ¾ pound
2 or 3 green peppers, about ½ pound
2 or 3 onins, about ¾ pound
3 or 4 tomatoes, about 1½ pounds
5 tablespoons olive oil
1 tablespoon chopped garlic
2 sprigs fresh thyme or ½ teaspoon dried
1 bay leaf
salt and freshly ground pepper
½ cup heavy cream
2 egg yolks
2 whole eggs
¼ cup finely chopped parsley

1. Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

2. Trim off and discard the ends of the eggplant. Cut the eggplant into one-inch cubes. There should be about four cups. Set aside.

3. Trim off and discard the ends of the zucchini. Cut the zucchini into one-inch cubes. Set aside.

4. Core and seed the green peppers. Cut the peppers into one-inch cubes. There should be about two cups. Set aside.

5. Coarsely chop the onion. There should be about three cups. Set aside.

6. Core the tomatoes and cut the tomatoes into one-inch cubes. There should be about three cups. Set aside.

7. Heat four tablespoons of oil in a large, heavy skillet or casserole; when it is quite hot, add the eggplant. Cook, stirring, about three minutes. Remove with a wooden spoon and put in a colander.

8. Add the zucchini to the skillet and cook, stirring, about three minutes. Add it to the eggplant.

9. Add the remaining oil to the skillet and add onion. Cook, stirring, until wilted and add the green peppers. Cook, stirring, about three minutes. Add the garlic, thyme and bay leaf. Add the eggplant and zucchini, salt and pepper to taste. Cook, stirring, about five minutes.

10. Add the tomatoes and stir. Cover closely and cook 20 minutes.

11. Uncover and cook about 10 minutes to reduce the liquid that will have accumulated. Let cool briefly.

12. Combine the cream, egg yolks and eggs and add to the ratatouille. Heat briefly, stirring. Blend in the parsley.

13. Butter 12 half-cup timbale molds and add the ratatouille mixture. Place the molds in a baking dish partly filled with hot water. Bring to the boil on top of the stove and place in the oven. Bake 30 minutes.

14. Unmold and serve hot.

Yield: 12 servings.

Common ¢ents

When water spots won't wipe off the chrome faucets, reach for the cooking or baby oil ... not the scouring powder. Rub drops of oil into the spots and wait a few minutes before wiping it off. You'll leave a fine film that will make fresh droplets roll away. Stubborn spots may take more than one oil treatment. Or even a short soaking with a vinegar-soaked cloth. But soaking chrome too long with vinegar can damage the finish.

More pieces of fine old china are broken by metal sink faucets than any other way, says a china department buyer. A rubber nozzle on the faucet is good insurance against some breakage when handwashing these treasures. In the dishwasher, he advises not placing china pieces too close together because the vibration of the washer can cause bumping and chipping.

Andrea's Interests Make Her a Rarity

It's not very often a girl in her early teens becomes interested in parliamentary procedure and that interest carries over into her first grown-up years.

Andrea Pite is one of the few young women in this category.

Now in her 20s and a biology student at University of Victoria, she still finds time to continue the study of parliamentary procedure at many levels.

Also, as president of the Victoria Parliamentary Study Group (VPSG) she passes on to others interested in rules of procedure, the knowledge gained.

It all started about nine years ago when Andrea "sat in", as she tells you, on a meeting "where I was completely confused."

She heard people making and seconding motions and speaking to resolutions and she saw them kept in order by a competent chairman, "but I didn't know what it was all about."

The fact she didn't understand that by following certain rules, order, regularity and dignity were maintained, the will of the majority served and the rights of the minority preserved, intrigued this teenager.

She was intrigued to a point that about a year later, when she heard of the VPSG, founded by a Toastmistress Club member, Maureen Butt, she decided to join.

"It wasn't a large group," Andrea remembers, "no more than a dozen interested people ... but I found it fascinating and I stayed with them until I went to Vancouver to enroll at the Institute of Technology with an idea of becoming a nurse."

Settled in the mainland city she missed VPSG meetings and its learning program.

So she joined the American Institute of Parliamentarians (AIP) and started takng its courses by correspondence.

This led, in 1973, to attendance at her first AIP convention in Houston, Texas.

PITE
... parliamentary expert

Since then it has been one step after another up the AIP executive ladder.

First as a member of the board of directors, then as secretary of the board and now as third vice-president and governor of the northwest region, including British Columbia, Alberta and the Yukon.

Miss Pite finished her course at Vancouver Technical Institute and came back to Victoria in 1973 to work for two years with the provincial government's medical services plan.

And it was during that time she decided to scrap her idea of becoming a nurse, go on to university and graduate as a biologist.

She rejoined the parliamentary study group here and soon was named its president. Now she has been elected to that position for a second time.

"We still average no more than 10 to 12 members," she says, "not always the same ones ... they come and they go."

Interest is high, "when they are first named heads of groups or committees and want to conduct meetings correctly.

"When their terms of office are over, very often that interest cools."

She also points out that it's not easy for those who have been in club work a long time and who see only one way of handling meetings ... "maybe the wrong way" ... to adopt new ideas.

It's been much easier for her, she believes "because I started very young. I hadn't learned bad habits through association with others and I had a good grounding with VPSG".

Although parliamentary procedure and its various phases occupies many of Andrea Pite's leisure hours, she does have other interests.

Five days a week, of course, are fully taken up with university classes. Included is a study of microtechnique, which she enthusiastically describes as "learning how to make microscopic slides of plant materials."

"I do a fair bit of reading", she told me, "and I try to keep it to an even balance between fiction and non-fiction.

"At present I'm concentrating on exams, everything is slanted toward that."

She lives at home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Pite on the Oak Bay Esplanade "and I will continue to do so, at least until I finish university."

Just as parliamentary procedure has "fascinated" her over the years, so do the meanings of words, especially the confusion that arises between spoken and written words and ways and means to overcome that confusion.

This has led her to join the International Society for General Semantics.

And she has found this society is dedicated through semantics — as the American Institute of Parliamentarians and the local VPSG is through parliamentary procedure — "to pinpointing hindrances to communications and to finding ways of overcoming them."

Take A Can of B.C. Salmon is an illustrated 12-page booklet containing some newfangled canned salmon recipes as well as some old favorites. Although Canadian homemakers are gradually getting used to the metric system, the recipes are given in the old and the new measures.

The booklet points out that the entire contents of a can of salmon can be consumed. The juice can be used in chowders and similar dishes. The bones have been sufficiently softened in the cooking process that they are edible. Some recipes even suggest that you mash and include the bones, because they are a good source of calcium and other nutrients.

You will find suggestions for tasty and nutritious salads, casseroles, sandwiches, loaves, hors d'oeuvres, chowders, pies, pizza and many other scrumptious dishes.

Nearly all canned salmon sold in Canada under various brand names comes from British Columbia's coast.

Too Many Parents

DEAR ABBY: our daughter is being married soon and I am making plans for a formal church wedding, dinner and reception.

My problem is that the young man who is marrying our daughter has too many parents.

His mother is presently married to her fifth husband! Worse yet, all four of her ex-husbands have remarried and she's friendly with all of them. To make matters more sticky, the boy's real father has a wife and two ex-wives with whom he is on friendly terms. I have been instructed to send invitations to all of these ex's. Should I?

How about the receiving line? We will be the laughing stock of this city if we have all those ex-husbands and ex-wives in the receiving line.

BRIDE'S BEFUDDLED MOM.

DEAR BEFUDDLED: Invite the friendly "ex's" to the wedding but ask only the groom's biological parents and their present spouses to stand in the receiving line.

DEAR ABBY: A reader asks, "What does a deliberately childless couple say to the "go forth and multiply" relatives and friends who harass them to be fruitful?"

Simple: Roll your eyes upward, look sad and sigh, "Oh, if we only could!"

Those few words are guaranteed to turn hostility and unwarranted nosiness into instant sympathy — and never again will you be bothered with that suggestion.

JACK B.

DEAR JACK: Why pretend you can't "multiply" when you can but choose not to for good and legitimate reasons?

DEAR ABBY: A year ago my husband had a nervous breakdown. In other words, he was mentally ill. After six months of psychiatric treatment he committed suicide. He was 28. I was 27 and left with two children.

My problem: When people find out that I am a widow, they invariably ask, "What happened to your husband?"

I'm not about to make up any lies, but I can't bring myself to tell anyone that my husband killed himself. My children are not yet old enough to understand what suicide is, so I am not faced with telling them yet. For the present I'm tellig the children their Daddy got sick and died, which is true, and something I'll not have to retract when the time comes to tell them the whole story.

But what do I tell people who ask me now? I'd like to have a pat answer that would politely say, "it's none of your business." Any ideas?

WIDOW

DEAR WIDOW: There is no polite way to say, "It's none of your business." Besides it will only arouse curiosity.

It will be easier for you in the long run if you realize that it is no reflection on you that your husband took his life. He was sick. The truth is always the best response, but you're not obligated to provide the details. Simply say your husband was ill and took his own life, and you'd rather not talk about it. That should put an end to any further questioning.

Balancing the Calory Budget

Food for Thought

By Dr. JEAN MAYER and
Dr. JOHANNA DWYER

We are just emerging from the fattest time of the year. The so-called "fat months" usually start in December, with the holiday feasts and first storms of the winter.

Most of us tend to eat and drink too much during the holidays, and then use the bad weather as an excuse to stay indoors watching TV or reading a book (while munching high-calorie snacks) rather than "working off" the extra calories in some sort of outdoor activity.

Since this winter has been particularly harsh in many areas, we suspect that many people will find that they need even more shaping up than usual. All too often, the temptation is to go on a crash diet, but we would like to urge a more logical, mathematical approach. And since many of you have just been through the annual taxtime budget crunch, balancing off caloric intake versus expenditure should have a familiar ring. It goes something like this:

Let's suppose that you are a relatively inactive housewife in your early 50s. You weigh 145 pounds, and you would like to lose 20 pounds before you go on your vacation in August. The first step is to determine how many calories a day you are now consuming. To do this, keep a careful record of what and how much you eat for a week. Using a calorie counter, you can get a good estimate of the number of calories you are taking in each day. Let's suppose it averages out to 2,200 calories a day.

Now you need to figure out how many calories you expend in a typical day. It might go something like this: 8 hours of routine housework, walking around the house, etc., 1.9 calories per minute or a total of 912; 1 hour washing, dressing, etc., 2 calories per minute or 120; 1 hour shopping, driving, etc., 1.8 calories per minute or 108; 6 hours of sitting, reading, etc., 1.3 calories per minute or 468; 8 hours in bed, .8 per minute or 384. This adds up to a total of almost 2,000 calories expended each day.

Since your intake is 200 calories more than your expenditure, and there are 3,500 calories in a pound of fat, you can expect to gain nearly two pounds a month, or an eight-pound weight gain during the winter months.

While losing these extra pounds may seem harder than putting them on, it is also a matter of mathematical logic. If you eliminate those 200 extra calories a day by, say, forgoing five teaspoons of sugar in coffee and tea and substituting an apple for ice cream as your dessert, you would be in caloric balance, burning up as many calories as you consume. But if you reduce your caloric intake by 500 more calories a day and maintain your present level of activity, you'll lose about a pound a week, meaning that you'll reach your goal of 125 pounds in 20 weeks.

As an alternative to cutting down 500 more calories, you could add two hours of walking to your daily activity, which will burn up 240 of those calories. If you decide to take off only a pound a week, you'll need to reduce your caloric intake by 260 calories instead of 500. And if you decide to do both — walk two hours a day and consume only 1,500 calories, which is still enough to maintain proper nutrition — you'll lose 20 pounds in about 13 weeks.

Of course, the more vigorous the physical activity, the more calories the activity consumes. Bicycling, for example, can burn up about 100 calories in 15 minutes. Swimming for an hour consumes nearly 600 calories, depending upon the stroke used and the temperature of the water. Twenty minutes of jogging will burn up 300 to 350 calories.

Like balancing your household budget, every little bit adds up. Walking up a couple of flights of stairs instead of taking the elevator; walking those four or five blocks to the store instead of driving; even pacing back and forth while you talk on the telephone will consume more calories than sitting watching TV to reading a novel. By the same token, a glass of beer, a handful of peanuts or potato chips, a couple of cookies or a donut with your midmorning coffee, all add unnecessary calories.

Maintaining your proper weight, just like living on a budget, does not need to be a constant struggle. Instead, it's all a matter of knowing how much you have to spend, and doing it with a bit of common sense.

SUDDEN DIZZINESS

your health

By L. L. COLEMAN, M.D.

When I lie down or when I make a sudden change in position, the room turns, I get dizzy, and feel faint. I don't have high blood pressure, which is what worries me. What else can cause this? — Mrs. K. R.

Dear Mrs. R.:

These transient episodes of dizziness and faintness, with or without nausea, can be caused by rapid changes of position. Many people whose blood pressure is normal may have what is called "relative low blood pressure."

It has been commonly observed that such people frequently complain of these momentary feelings of dizziness. Most often it is associated with poor eating habits, especially with long intervals of no eating.

A careful physical examination can rule this out and also rule out the possibility of low blood sugar. The blood circulation, the condition of the inner ear, the heart and lungs, too, can be explored as possible factors in the production of these uncomfortale moments.

In the meantime, try to avoid making rapid changes of position. Lying down should be a slow process. Similarly, when you rise in the morning, get up slowly so that your blood circulation to the brain can accommodate itself. In addition, you might try increasing your protein for breakfast with cottage cheese or similar cheeses.

Try to limit your salt and fluid intake moderately. Before embarking on such a regime, a telephone call to your doctor will give you added assurance.

Why aren't there laws against tattoo parlors? My son is 23 and foolishly allowed himself to be tattooed along with two other friends. Can these tattoos be removed? — Mr. L. L.

Dear Mr. L.:

Many tattoo parlors have been ruled as being illegal. In some areas where they are still permitted, tatooing is under constant inspection by the local boards of health. For there are constant dangers to health in tattooing. Hepatitis and even syphilis have been reported in people who had been tattooed with infected needles.

Unfortunately, many young people fall into the trap of being pressured by their friends to join them in being tattooed. Almost always they regret it immediately thereafter. But regretting is not a technique for eradicating these marks on the skin.

The armed forces constantly point out the hazards of tattooing, warning the men that eventually they'll be sorry for having had it done. The warnings are apparently mot sufficient dissuaders.

Plastic surgeons have devised all kinds of techniques for removing tattoos. None of the methods are nearly as effective as staying away from a tattoo parlor.

Who Should Play God?

The Sperm Merchants

(Fifth of nine parts)

On August 18, 1971, The New York Times carried an article about a young man, aged 17, health excellent, an A student. He was, by all accounts, average in every respect. Except for one. This teen-ager was the first human being conceived from sperm that had been frozen, stored, thawed and finally injected into a woman's uterus, where it impregnated an egg and developed to full term.

The anonymous subject of this newspaper story is just one of perhaps one million living Americans who have been born through the use of artificial insemination. The number is increasing at the rate of more than 20,000 a year.

If you are surprised at these large numbers, you are not alone. Less than 10 years ago, a public opinion survey conducted by pollster Louis Harris found that only three per cent of the American public had even heard of artificial insemination. Very likely, the vast majority of those who have been conceived by the method not only do not know the facts of their own birth, but are probably as ignorant of artificial insemination as most of us.

"Where do babies come from?" the curious perenially ask their embarrassed parents. Now, thanks to the new scientific processes of manufacturing life, there are at least seven answers to that innocent question, not counting the one most of us are familiar with. A list of "potential technologies of eugenics and euphenics" includes:

(1) artificial insemination of a wife by her husband;

(2) artificial insemination by a donor;

(3) ovarian, or egg, transplant from one woman to another and subsequent artificial insemination by either the husband or a selected donor;

(4) fertilization of an egg in vitro (in glass) followed by implantation into a woman;

(5) parthenogenesis (virgin birth), the development of an unfertilized egg;

(6) nuclear transplantation, or cloning, in which a cell is made to produce an exact genetic duplicate of the donor of the nucleus, male or female;

(7) embryo fusion, or the joining together of the two individual embryos to form a human with four biological parents instead of the traditional two.

Not all of these methods are now feasible, though extensive experimentation has proceeded on each. Dr. Joshua Lederberg believes that "essentially anything that we care to do in the area of biological engineering" can be accomplished in the next 10 to 30 years, given enough money.

These alternatives to the old-fashioned method of sexual intercourse gain their real significance when combined with the molecular knowledge resulting from the Biological Revolution.

Artificial insemination, embryo implants, cloning and test-tube babies, for instance, may result in full-scale genetic engineering, a government report indicates, because they open the way "to substitute the synthetic DNA for the natural DNA in the egg, sperm or body cell and thus regulate the development of the individual."

Since the easiest path to the Genetic Age is by shaping the biological inheritance of future generations, the wedding of molecular biology with the methods of manipulated birth produces a powerful marriage of eugenic interest. In this combination, suggests the Journal of the American Medical Association, lies the future:

"The popular term, genetic engineering, might be considered as covering anything having to do with the manipulation of the gametes or the fetuses, for whatever purpose, from conception other than by sexual union, to treatment of disease in utero, to the ultimate manufacture of a human being to exact specification . . . Thus, the earliest procedure in genetic engineering is artificial insemination, next . . . artificial fertilization . . . next, artificial implantation . . . in the future, corporeal gestation . . . and finally, what is popularly meant by genetic engineering, the production — or better, the biological manufacture — of a human being to desired specifications."

Close to one per cent of all children born in the United States are the product of artificial insemination (AI).

The technique falls broadly into two categories — AIH (artificial insemination by husband) and AID (by donor). Couples turn to AIH when the husband has a low sperm count in his semen, or is sexually impotent but has normal sperm quantity and quality. AID is often employed when the husband is absolutely sterile, or has an hereditary disease that might be passed on to his children, or when a blood incompatibility exists between husband and wife.

There are other immediate applications of artificial insemination as well. Many experts believe that by the end of this decade, parents using AI will be able to choose their baby's sex with a 90 per cent degree of accuracy. Each sperm carries within its chromosomes genes that indicate sex. One clinic that has managed to separate "male" and "female" sperm is already accepting applications from couples who want male children only.

Do parents want to predetermine the sex of their children? Apparently they do. A 1973 study at the Stanford Medical Center indicated that 36 per cent of parents would select the sex of their child if given the opportunity, while another 31 per cent said they might do so but were not sure.

Science writer Caryl Rivers points to surveys that have consistently shown that a substantial majority of parents would choose a male offspring, at least for their first child. Thus sex selection through artificial insemination may dramatically upset the natural process that keeps our sexual division, if not completely equal in numbers, at least on an even keel.

While one group of researchers concentrates on manipulation of the sperm, a second and related field centers on the female cell, the ovum or egg.

Experiments with the fertilization of an egg in the laboratory and its subsequent implantation into a woman is a technique that James D. Watson believes will "likely be general medical practice, capable of routine performance in many nations, within some 10 to 20 years." Ultimately this line of research should lead to the creation of test-tube grown babies.

The ability to keep tissue alive in vitro has been recognized since 1907, when Dr. Ross Harrison of Johns Hopkins University began growing frog cells in petri dishes. In 1912, Dr. Alexis Carrel, a Nobel Prize winner, removed a piece of tissue from a chicken heart and placed it in a glass container filled with fluid. Carrel's chicken heart continued living in vitro for a full 33 years, outliving the scientist by two years.

The fertilization of eggs in a laboratory is a development related to the tissue culture field. As far back as the 1940s, Dr. John Rock, in the course of experiments to develop a birth control poll, succeeded in fertilizing a human egg with sperm in a test tube. Following fertilization, the egg went through several divisions.

In 1961, an Italian biologist, Dr. Daniele Petrucci, had considerably greater results. Petrucci had fertilized an egg and allowed it to grow for 59 days outside the human body. He claimed that "a heartbeat was discernible" but he was forced to destroy his creation because "it became deformed and enlarged — a monstrosity."

Petrucci, a Catholic, went so far as to give his embryo conditional baptism and extreme unction, but this was deemed insufficient by Italian authorities and the Church hierarchy. Under orders from the Pope, Petrucci finally gave up his attempts to grow life in vitro.

By 1966, in the Soviet Union, Dr. Pyotr Anakhin of the Academy of Medical Sciences in Moscow announced that he and a team of Soviet doctors had surpassed Petrucci's record by keeping alive more than 250 human embryos in test tubes for periods of up to six months. The largest specimen reached a weight of one pound, two ounces, before dying.

In 1973, James Watson appeared before a Senate committee in Washington to warn that the first baby resulting from an embryo implant could be born at any time. When it happens, he added, "all hell is going to break loose."

In fact, all hell did break loose in 1974 during a British medical conference when one of the featured speakers, Dr. Douglas Bevis, stunned his audience by glibly stating that after 30 attempted implantations, three had finally been "crowned with success." His announcement caused a storm of controversy that rages to this day.

Because of the carnival atmosphere generated by the world press coverage of his work, Bevis has refused to discuss his experiments except to say that two of the babies are currently living in England and the third in Italy. Though one newspaper has offered him $72,000 to tell all, Bevis remains silent.

One day, he says, he will explain his work in detail in the pages of a medical journal.

WILDLIFE FED TO TRY AGAIN

Directors of the B.C. Wildlife Federation want the provincial government to honor the memory of conservationist Roderick Haig-Brown by naming the Adams River Salmon Park after him.

Howard English, of Victoria, fishery adviser to the federation, said the resolution will be submitted to the organization's annual convention at Chilliwack in May.

The move follows a government decision last year not to name a new park at Schoen Lake on Vancouver Island after the internationally-acclaimed naturalist and author who died in Campbell River Oct. 9, 1976.

The park is near Chase in the Shuswap Lake area.

"I will support the resolution," he said. "I would have preferred naming Schoen Lake after him as he was a Vancouver Islander. But I doubt if the government will backtrack."

Bob Lindsay, president of the Victoria Fish and Game Association, a member of the federation, also said he will support the resolution.

"He was a B.C. conservationist of international stature worthy of recognition by all Canadians," he said. "His works seems to have been more appreciated outside the province."

Bill Otoway, federation executive director, said conservationists were not impressed by Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf's excuse that the proposal to name Schoen Lake after Haig-Brown was dropped because he was affronted when someone told the press about it without consulting him.

How Your Garden Grows

Caring for indoor plants

House plants can add interest to any home. There are many types available, but all require the following:

1. Abundant indirect light. All plants depend on light for their metabolic processes, and will not survive long at low light intensity. The light source can be a window, incandescent bulbs or fluorescent tubes.
2. Sufficient water. Indoor plants should be watered thoroughly—but the soil or growing medium should be allowed to dry between waterings. Perfect drainage is required to prevent water retention and consequent rotting of plant roots.
3. Adequate plant food. A completely balanced plant food containing nitrogen, phosphorous and potash is recommended. Any of these products will do the job:
   Green Valley Hi-Sol 20-20-20, which also contains minor plant food elements.
   Green Valley Liquid Fish Fertilizer.
   Green Valley Liquid Seaweed Fertilizer.

GREEN VALLEY
20-20-20
HI-SOL
5-1-1
100% ORGANIC
FISH
FERTILIZER
SEAWEED

Each of these products should be mixed with water prior to application. Indoor plants should be fed every 2 to 3 weeks during spring and summer. Feeding should taper off to once a month during the fall, and stop altogether in December and January.

To avoid problems with soil insects and diseases, use a good sterilized potting soil such as Green Valley Potting Soil. Plants should be repotted at least once a year—otherwise, toxic materials build up which may adversely affect the plant.

Hydroponic Gardening

Hydroponics involves growing plants without soil, and is becoming recognized as a more efficient way to grow a wide range of flowers and vegetables.

In place of soil, an aggregate such as vermiculite, sand, pebbles or sawdust is used. This growing medium is kept moist—but not overly wet—at all times, and suitable plant nutrients are added at regular intervals.

Green Valley Hydroponic Plant Food is specially formulated for this type of gardening. Used as directed, this soluble plant food will help you create a highly fertile growing environment.

With hydroponics, you can grow beautiful flowers and nutritious vegetables under controlled conditions.

Region Seeks Police Takeover

The Capital Regional District will propose a regional takeover of police forces in a brief to be submitted in May to a provincial government committee reviewing regional governments.

Regional board chairman Jim Campbell also says the provincial government should impose incorporation on Langford, Colwood and any other areas it feels are large enough to require local government.

The brief, written by Campbell, suggests the region take over land-use planning and be given authority to make local councils produce community plans that conform with regional plans.

The brief was accepted by the board at Wednesday's meeting at the senior citizens' centre in Sidney.

It suggests regional directors be elected at large and that the chairman, at least, be elected by a regional vote instead of the present procedure in which the chairman is selected from members of the board.

Campbell said Wednesday he will ask the review committee to return to Victoria for the presentation because there are several other briefs from this area yet to be submitted.

The brief recommends local councils retain responsibility for such matters as servicing and regulation of property, local land-use, playgrounds, garbage collection and fire protection. It does recommend, however, fire departments work through a regional policy with the ultimate goal being provincial training for firemen.

The region, states the brief, should be responsible for regional land-use policy, police, public health services, inspection services, sewage trunks and fire protection policy. It should also take over design of regional road systems; maintenance, administration and operation of transit services, economic development, regional parks and local land-use planning in non-municipal areas.

The brief concludes with the suggestion the review committee remind the provincial government that it has "a duty to establish, define, support and put in place the kinds of government which are required at the 'third level'" for the proposed incorporation of parts of the western community.

Common Market Urged

MINNEAPOLIS (CP) — Canadian and U.S. businessmen agreed Wednesday that their countries should be moving toward a common market and less government bureaucracy.

Speakers at a high-powered, business-oriented conference on Canada-U.S. relations said that in fields from immigration policy to zoning laws, governments are hampering continental economic activity.

"The natural situation is there to have an American common market and we ought to get at it," said Chairman Raymond Herzog of the 3M company.

Herzog said his company's experience has shown that both countries can benefit when factories in each specialize in goods for the common market instead of competing.

To increase such production-sharing, he said, Canada and the United States should negotiate freer trade and "do away with that 19th-century notion that each country should produce everything it needs within its own borders."

A special benefit to Canada of such rationalized North American production, Herzog said, would be more competitive Canadian exports to markets such as Europe and Japan.

Other speakers gave general support to his thesis, while noting that achievement of a common market would be slow.

Donald Love, president of Oxford Development Group Ltd. in Edmonton, complained that tight U.S. immigration laws are a handicap to the free movement of executives between the Canadian and U.S. operations of multinational enterprises.

U.S. Loans To Chile Queried

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Representatives Henry Reuss, chairman of the House of Representatives banking committee, on Wednesday asked six large U.S. banks to explain reported loans totalling $1 billion to Chile since 1973.

A study released Tuesday by the Institute of Policy Studies — a Washington research office — said the loans were made by Bankers Trust, Chemical Bank, Citicorp, and Morgan Guaranty Trust, all of New York; the First Chicago Bank and Wells Fargo Bank of San Francisco.

Reuss (Dem. Wis.), said in a telegram sent to each of the banks that their reported actions are not helpful to the U.S. policy of restricting loans to countries that violate human rights.

"U.S. representatives to the World Bank and other international lending institutions have voted against loans to Chile in 1977 and 1978," he said in the telegram.

"I hope that you will give the American people a full public explanation," Reuss said.

Bar Siege Ends Quietly

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A robbery attempt that turned into a siege at a Las Vegas bar Wednesday ended with the surrender of a man after he released the eight persons he had held hostage.

The man, not immediately identified, gave up after 4½ hours of negotiations with police and Rev. Jesse Wesley of Bethel Baptist Church.

Lalonde Views Praised

NEW YORK (CP) — Marc Lalonde, federal-provincial relations minister, said Wednesday Ottawa's emphasis on preventive medicine has helped change attitudes in health care for the better.

Lalonde, former health minister, was honored by the American Health Foundation for his work in preventive medicine and received the 1978 Eleanor Naylor Dana award.

He told a black-tie dinner in his honor that there are many other Canadian officials who helped develop the concepts of preventive medicine set out in a document — published four years ago — called A New Perspective on The Health of Canadians.

That document sought to make every Canadian aware that there is much more to the provision of good health than in the traditional approach of only dealing with the patient when he or she becomes sick.

"There are still improvements to be made in the delivery of medical services, perhaps even huge improvements," Lalonde said.

Beirut Boils Again

BEIRUT (AP) — Syrian tanks and rockets hammered Christian militiamen in southeastern section of this Lebanese capital for the fifth day today as President Elias Sarkis negotiated with the Syrians for a ceasefire.

Sporadic firing shattered a night-long lull. Residents trapped in basements reported by telephone that Christian sniping was spreading.

The police reported at least 82 persons killed and 267 wounded since a weekend fight between militiamen in adjoining Christian and Moslem districts developed into the year's second major clash between Christians and Syrian peacekeeping forces.

Sarkis met with the commanders of the 25,000-man Syrian force in Lebanon, and informed sources said a truce agreement was near. The sources said joint Syrian-Christian committees will be formed to patrol the area of the fighting and to set up permanent checkpoints.

Nurses and doctors braved a rocket barrage to evacuate more than 60 patients safely from a six-storey hospital in the line of fire. A spokesman for the hospital said the two top floors of the Al Hayat Hospital, including the operating rooms, took numerous direct hits, forcing the evacuation of eight women in labor.

Just Nowhere to Phone

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — An Eskimo co-operative spent $5 million to install new telephone systems in 10 Arctic Circle villages. But a dispute over who owns satellite earth stations has left the villagers with no one to call but each other.

Officials from RCA's Alaska Communications and the governor's office of telecommunications blame each other for the problem.

Eight of the villages are ready to be tied in with RCA's national communications system, which would allow long distance calls. The other two villages will be ready soon.

The telephone systems are operated by the Kotzebue-based OTZ Telephone Co-operative Inc. The 10 villages have a total population of 2,200 ranging from 60 in Kobuk to 462 in Noorvik.

Under a 1975 agreement between RCA and the state, the state bought the earth stations but the corporation installed and operated them, the state contends. But RCA says it owns the stations.

Richard Edwards, lawyer for the state, said RCA is "holding the villages for ransom" to get ownership of the stations.

RCA says it is "ready, willing and able" to hook up the villages, but wants to resolve the dispute first.

Commissioner Marvin Weatherly of the Alaska Public Utilities Commission heard the arguments and then ordered the state, the commission staff and RCA to come up with "findings of fact and conclusions of law" to resolve the stalemate.

"The bottom line is what is a practical solution today, to provide telephone service to the region that allows access not only to the state but the world," Weatherly said.

Bikini Islanders Face Urgent Move

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has decided to relocate the 112 residents of Bikini Island against their will because of radioactivity on the Pacific Ocean atoll, the site of hydrogen bomb tests 20 to 30 years ago.

John DeYoung, an interior department official, told a House of Representatives appropriations subcommittee Wednesday that the level of strontium 90 in the residents' bodies is reaching dangerous levels.

The move might take place as early as next month if tests on the natives of the island show an increase in the radioactive material, DeYoung said, adding that the atoll "will be off limits for 30 to 50 years."

The Atomic Energy Commission in 1969 declared that Bikini Island was safe enough for its natives to return and settle. They had been removed at the time of the hydrogen bomb tests which took place between 1947 and 1958.

Starting in 1970, about 112 natives returned. But three years ago, medical tests detected higher than normal amounts of radioactive strontium, cesium and plutonium in the natives.

Ruth Van Cleve, director of the interior department's Office of Territorial Affairs, said Enyu, an island in the same atoll, is likely to be a safe site for relocation of the Bikini natives.

$10 Billion Overrun Predicted for Trident

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The cost of an expanded fleet of Trident missile-carrying submarines could run $7 billion to $10 billion more than suggested by the U.S. Navy, the General Accounting Office says.

In a report on the status of the increasingly costly and production-delayed Trident and its nuclear missiles, the GAO said if a fleet of 29 vessels were built, the cost could reach more than $50 billion — $10 billion more than estimated by Navy planners.

A smaller fleet of 21 vessels could cost more than $37 billion, compared to a Navy figure of $30 billion, the GAO said.

The congressional auditing agency, describing its own estimates as "conservative," called on Defence Secretary Harold Brown to provide detailed cost information. It said Congress and the GAO have urged the Pentagon for several years to estimate both the ultimate size and cost of a Trident fleet.

The first Trident, already expected to be a year late when it goes into service in 1981, has attracted attention because its cost has soared from an original estimate of $793 million to $1.2 billion, nearly a 50 percent increase.

Other escalations have pushed over-all costs of the original 14-ship building program more than $1 billion beyond original estimates. The Tridents are being built by General Dynamics, which is embroiled in a $544 million claims dispute with the Navy over other submarines.

MOVIE REVIEW:

Freed Saga A Blast From Past

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

In 1952 a disc jockey who played classical music at a Cleveland radio station discovered something amazing. The white kids down at the local record store preferred the hard-driving raunchy sounds of black rhythm and blues artists like Little Richard and Chuck Berry to popular crooners like Perry Como. So the disc jockey started playing the previously segregated rhythm and blues to his white listeners, and he called it rock and roll.

The man was Alan Freed and the term rock and roll was a black expression for making love. In the following years Freed and rock and roll were to become the hate objects of parents across America. His show, Moondog's Rock and Roll party, and a series of concerts in Cleveland and later in New York opened the door to black rhythm and blues artists and introduced a generation of American teenagers to a kind of music they had never heard before.

In addition to parents, major record companies and the establishment in general never forgave him for that. Calling it vulgar and disgusting, they did everything in their power to destroy the music, and disc jockeys like Freed.

Rock and roll won in the end, but Freed and a few others didn't. Caught up in the big payola scandals of 1959 — when he was found guilty of accepting gifts in return for playing certain records — Freed lost his show and his future.

Although Freed did take bribes, so did almost everyone else in the record industry. He was persecuted because of his prominent role in promoting rock and roll and died an alcoholic a few years later in California.

American Hot Wax is a romanticized account of the last days of Freed's glorious career as the reigning mogul of rock. Working for a prominent New York radio station, Freed is a big wheel and powerful promoter who has groupies and aspiring vocalists hanging around his office day and night. The movie's high point is a fictional rock concert Freed has arranged at the Brooklyn Paramount Theatre on Labor Day, 1959, that ends in a riot as police try to break it up.

Although this concert never actually took place, it is patterned after a real concert Freed staged in Boston attended by thousands of teenagers who came close to rioting.

The title role is played by Tim McIntire with chain-smoking, whisky-guzzling intensity. McIntire gives a powerful depiction of Freed's public persona, but never dips too far into the character of the man behind the legend. It's obvious director Floyd Mutrix wants it that way: Freed is the central character, but the real star is rock and roll. To give his movie the flavor of the early scrappy days of rock and roll, Mutrix traded accuracy for action. He doesn't follow the true sequence of events too closely and most of the songs in the movie weren't recorded in 1959. But Mutrix does a good job recreating the mood. The movie contains some oldie goldies from the great Buddie Hollie, Elvis Presley and long forgotten groups like the Platters and the Zodiacs.

Putting in an energetic cameo appearance is the amazing 57-year-old Chuck Berry, who plays himself 20 years ago and looks the part. Time has not been as kind to Jerry Lee Lewis, who half-heartedly performs the final number in Freed's concert.

Larraine Newman, one of the stars of Saturday Night Live, gives a curiously lacklustre performance as an aspiring songwriter who is discovered by Freed along with the vocal group she's been coaching. Newman can't seem to make a real person out of her part and comes dangerously close to turning it into a caricature, something easy to do in a movie like this.

Orbison Recovers

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Singer Roy Orbison, who has suffered his share of tragedy, considers himself lucky that he underwent open heart surgery in January.

"Without immediate attention, I could have had a massive coronary," Orbison, 41, said in an interview. "I'd have gone on tour in Australia in February and it could have happened there."

Orbison best known for hits like Pretty Woman, Only the Lonely and I'm Crying, was in hospital 10 days in January after the four-hour arterial bypass operation.

He plans to resume road dates on weekends in May. Then he hopes to do a 30-day, cross-country tour in June, a Canadian tour in September, a British tour in October and an Australian tour in December or January.

He's currently writing songs for the movie, The Living Legend, which will be based roughly on the life of Elvis Presley and feature Presley's girl-friend, Ginger Alden.

Orbison, whose trademark is a pair of ever-present sunglasses, lost his wife in a motorcycle accident 12 years ago. Two years after that two of his three sons died in a fire.

He sought medical help this year when he developed chest discomfort and pain in his arms.

"Actually, I had three arterial bypasses. One was closed almost completely, one was closed 75 per cent and the other 65 per cent.

"Three days after the operation, I felt 30 to 40 per cent better. Now, I'm more alert, more aware and my taste, smell and hearing have improved.

Other Nashville-based entertainers who have undergone similar operations include Marty Robbins, Grandpa Jones and Lester Flatt.

"I heard from people all over the world, ranging from a farmer in Kansas to Neil Diamond and Linda Ronstadt," Orbison said. "Everyone was terrific."

Miss Ronstadt was nominated for a Grammy Award this year for her version of Blue Bayou, which Orbison wrote and recorded 15 years ago.

"She did a marvellous job with it," Orbison said. "My first impression was that not much happened at the start of the song, but then it turned on nicely at the end."

RADIO CITY GETS REPRIEVE

NEW YORK (AP) — It was just after midnight — 36 Rockettes had turned in their sequined slippers and were preparing to move from chorus line to unemployment line.

But there were no pumpkins. "We're in business," announced ballet captain Rosemary Novellino. "Radio City Music Hall has been saved."

In 11th-hour bargaining between Rockefeller Centre Inc., owners of the 6,000-seat showplace, and the state's Urban Development Corp., New York state agreed to foot the bill for one year of operations.

The art deco palace, which had been scheduled to close after its final Easter show Wednesday night, has lost millions of dollars in recent years because of declining attendance. Rockefeller Centre predicted the theatre will be $3.5 million in the red this year.

Under the agreement, Radio City Music Hall will be open today.

Bette to Get Gold

LONDON (AP) — Singer Bette Midler, known as The Divine Miss M, will be paid in gold bullion for a planned British concert tour this fall, a spokesman for her London publicity agents said Wednesday.

"Her manager believes all currencies are suspect these days and wants to make sure she doesn't take a loss six months from now," the spokesman said.

The agents, Rogers and Cowan, declined to say what Miss Midler's fee was for the shows.

"This isn't a publicity stunt," the spokesman said.

Gillies Quits Politics

people

OTTAWA — James Gillies, highly regarded university professor who became a Conservative economic critic, has decided to quit politics and return to university. Gillies unexpected decision was announced by Conservative Leader Joe Clark's office Wednesday after a member of the MP's own election campaign organization said he knew nothing of rumors of the resignation. Gillies and Sinclair Stevens of York Simcoe shared most of the economic in the Conservative caucus, which Gillies headed.

TORONTO — John Angus (Bud) McDougald, the chairman and president of Argus Corp. who died last month, has set aside a $2-million investment fund for his widow. Although McDougald's will has been probated, the value of his estate, estimated several years ago to be worth at least $250 million, has not been determined yet.

BOSTON — Jack Lemmon says it took a year to arrange enough free time to star in Tribute — Bernard Slade's new play that began its pre-Broadway run in Boston this week. But the Oscar-winner figured he could wait that long to make his return to Broadway. He's stayed away since 1961. Tribute, which opened Sunday, is being presented at the Colonial Theatre through April 29. It's the story of a man dying of cancer trying to make peace with his son, described by a Boston Globe reviewer as a "warm funny, likable comedy."

BOSTON — The Christian Science Monitor says Senator Edward Kennedy has told friends and colleagues that he is seriously considering running for the U.S. presidency in 1980. The newspaper says the Massachusetts Democrat believes President Jimmy Carter may be vulnerable, and that 1980 may be Kennedy's "last chance," as one Kennedy friend put it.

THEIR SONG BEAT FINE

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Prosecutor Thomas Graves sounded a new note in jurisprudence by plea bargaining Wednesday with a barbershop quartet.

Graves, an assistant attorney-general, was told the group's tenor had moved and had failed to get a new driver's licence.

"Well, if the judge likes barbershop quartet music as much as I do, maybe we can work something out," Graves said. He asked the four if they would mind singing.

At the song's end, the quartet was given a nice review by Judge Willard Dixon.

"You've heard of singing for your supper? Well, this is the first time I've heard of anyone singing for the dismissal of their traffic ticket. Case dismissed. They were great."

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Being a consistent winner in top-echelon tournament play requires not only excellent technical execution in both bidding and play, but also an aptitude for coming up with the unusual at the right time. An example of this all-around ability can be observed in today's deal.

Both sides vulnerable.
North deals.

♡ K J 10 8 3 2
◇ K
♣ 10 2

| WEST | EAST |
|---|---|
| ♠ Q 9 8 2 | ♠ 7 3 |
| ♡ Q 5 | ♡ 9 7 4 |
| ◇ A 9 | ◇ Q 10 7 5 4 2 |
| ♣ K 9 7 6 5 | ♣ A 3 |

SOUTH
♠ K 10 5
♡ A 6
◇ J 8 6 3
♣ Q J 8 4

The bidding:

| North | East | South | West |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♡ | Pass | 1 ♠ | Pass |
| 2 ♠ | Pass | 2 NT | Pass |
| 3 ♡ | Pass | 3 NT | Pass |
| Pass | Pass | | |

Opening lead: Six of ♣.

South's initial response of one spade on a three-card suit was abnormal, but he just didn't want to bid either two clubs or two diamonds on a broken-down minor suit. When North raised spades, South's rebid of two notrump denied interest in the spade suit. North then rebid his heart suit, and South repudiated this suit also by bidding three notrump.

After winning the opening lead with his ace of clubs, East returned his remaining club. South now came up with his unusual, and deceptive, play: he put up the queen of the clubs. In so doing, he implanted in West's mind the illusion that South had no more clubs. And, from West's position, he assumed that East had started with the A-J-8-3 of clubs; and that East, at trick two, had returned his fourth-highest club. So, at trick three, West played back a low club, the trick being won by South's eight-spot.

When play had ended, declarer, by picking up West's queen of hearts and guessing successfully to finesse against West for the queen of spades, made 11 tricks: three spades, six hearts and two clubs. This was a top-score for North-South.

South's deliberate "squandering" of the club queen at trick two was motivated by the fear that if he played low (which he could well have done if he wanted to create two sure club tricks, since the ten-spot was in dummy), West, upon taking his king, would assume that South possessed the queen and jack. West would then shift to diamonds, and the defenders would make two diamond tricks. In this case, declarer would make only nine tricks.

SOLUTIONS FRIDAY

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Friday, April 14
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You get lowdown on costs, motives, length of time, intentions of family member. Welcome truth, whether or not it comes with a smiling face. Plan accordingly. Your position is stronger than some would have you believe. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure prominently. Stick with number 8.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Travel, movement, letters and calls related to vacation, reservations and relatives are featured. In matters of speculation, stick with number 9. Finish what you start. Get rid of burden not rightly your own. You have life of your own to live — and others should become aware of it.

GEMINI (April 21-June 20): Accent on transforming bright ideas into money. You get fresh opportunity, a chance to reverse rhythm of defeat. Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently. Apply creative energies. Make new start in new direction.

CANCER (June 21- July 22): Intuition is sharply honed — follow through on hunch. Heed instincts. Wear bright colors, make personal appearances. Aquarian teacher is on your side, despite disagreements. Aggressive associate is unsure, plagued with self-doubt. Be compassionate.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You should celebrate ability to communicate, despite one who sings the blues. Temporary delay or confinement will be followed by exciting possibilities, good news and a rare vacation opportunity. Stick with number 3.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Check details; be aware of fine print, read between the lines. Accent on friends, wishes, romance, result of business investment. You are on solid ground — wish is fulfilled if you stand tall, refusing to sell yourself short.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be analytical. Obtain hint from Virgo message. Don't be satisfied to know merely that something happened — find out why it occurred. Member of opposite sex is in picture. Gain indicated through the written word. Career is boosted if you ask the right questions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Make adjustment within family circle. Win rather than force your way. Look beyond the immediate. Long-range projection proves valid. Open lines of communication. Taurus, Libra figure prominently — so does the number 6. Journey could result in enlightenment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Mystery should not be feared. You get chance to delve beneath surface indications. Financial situation in connection with partner or mate is accented. Don't jump to conclusions regarding leases, rentals, taxes. Wait for entire picture!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Get reinforcements. Legal ally is needed in your corner. Emphasis on contracts, cementing of a relationship, partnership, marriage. Another Capricorn is in picture — and so is one born under Cancer. Money, power and love play their dynamic roles.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Peek around corners — deal with Aries, Libra persons. Find ways to negotiate differences; don't buckle under to threats, hysterical outbursts. Accent moderation, service, the recognizing of major priorities.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Speculative ventures, change, variety and the number 1 figure prominently. Imprint you own style. Stress originality, independence and a passionate belief in personal principles. Leo, Aquarius and Sagittarius could play significant roles.

IF APRIL 14 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are analytical, creative, able to express concepts, ideas in a poetic manner. You are a reporter, a recorder of pictures, trends, cycles — and your perception often is aided by some extrasensory perception. Gemini, Virgo and Sagittarius play important roles in you life. July and October will be memorable months for you in 1978. You learn lessons conerning basic values — and trust.

Firefighters Go to Arbitration

Mediator Clark Gilmour is unable to resolve a contract dispute between Victoria and its firefighters and the matter will now go to arbitration.

Richard Brideson, president of the 115-member firemen's union, said today Gilmour withdrew from the dispute Tuesday after meeting with the parties on two occasions.

He said no progress was made and that, in fact, the city reduced its offer of a four per cent increase in salary and fringe benefits in a one-year agreement.

He said the city was taking back some fringe benefit items and not tacking any more on salaries.

"They are pushing us awfully hard and we are pretty upset," Brideson said.

The firemen are asking for a total package increase of six per cent, the maxiumum allowable under the federal anti-inflation guidelines.

The firemen's contract expired Dec. 31.

Brideson said there were some housekeeping items that could have been cleaned up with Gilmour's help but the city seemed unwilling to budge.

He said the member's are upset because they don't see the need to go through an expensive arbitration procedure at a time when salary increases are controlled by anti-inflation guidelines.

Brideson said this will be the 25th time in as many years that the firemen's dispute has had to be settled by arbitration. The process in 1975 cost $30,000, he added.

He said the union will ask the labor ministry later this week to appoint an arbitrator.

Apartments Buffered

Esquimalt aldermen have completed the rezoning of apartment areas into a buffer of duplex zoning for single-family housing in the municipality.

Mayor Art Young said today council's action Monday completes down-zoning started in 1975 in conformity with the Esquimalt community plan. Most of the areas affected were rezoned then, leaving only two apartment-zoned areas to be re-designated.

Young said the step removes development pressure from well-maintained single family housing and allows duplex density zoning to separate single family from multiple-density apartments.

A two-thirds majority of council was needed to pass the measure, and council voted unanimously in favor of the rezoning bylaw, with Young and Ald. Conrad Lundgren abstaining because they reside in the affected areas.

A number of property owners protested the bylaw because they felt it will have the effect of devaluing their land. Young said he could understand their point of view, but the benefit of rezoning to the municipality at large was overriding.

The two areas are the blocks bounded by Admirals, Coles, Kindersley and Naden, and the 600-block Admirals.

Dealing with other matters, council approved a 17.3 per cent increase in Esquimalt's share of Greater Victoria Library budget, for a total $205,960 of the $2.38 million estimate for 1978-79, and gave preliminary approval to the lease agreement for the juvenile detention home.

Esquimalt will ask for clarification as to why the $27,924 annual rental for the city-owned detention site has not risen.

Aldermen referred to committee a letter from CUPE Local 333 for further discussion. The municipal employees' local rejected a proposal to hire 15 students under a provincial work incentive program on grounds that not enough information was provided and that the hiring could conflict with the union's employment objectives.

Professor Appeals

PARIS (AP) — A French mathematics professor said Wednesday he has appealed to Soviet President Brezhnev to allow a prominent Russian research mathematician to accept a teaching post in France. Prof. Jean-Pierre Aubin, director of the state-owned Centre for Research on Decision Mathematics, said Soviet Prof. A. D. Loffe, a specialist in variation calculus, was appointed to an associate professorship at Paris Dauphine University more than a year ago.

It's Hedge-Trimming Time

Hedges are trimmed in April and August. These dates are selected because new growth is made in June and September and the scars of trimming are quickly masked.

Many types of plants are used for hedging, small leaved and large leaved, deciduous and evergreen, coniferous, and the deciduous flowering shrubs.

Small leaved plants include Buxus (Box), Lonicera nitida (shiny-leaved honeysuckle), Pachistima myrsinites (native B.C. to California), and Ligustrum vulgare (common or European Privet) or L. ovalifolium (California Privet). This group is pruned with hedge shears or electric trimmer.

A hedge five feet high should be 12 in. wide at the top and 30 to 36 ins. wide at the base. The sloping sides are necessary for the growth at the base to receive full light and sun and be well clothed with leaves.

For the amateur it is wise to stretch a string on stakes along the top of the hedge and another on stakes along the bottom to give the respective widths.

A piece of 1 by 2 is rested against the strings to give the angle for cutting, and moved along a few feet ahead of the areas being cut as the work progresses. In this way a level top and an even slope is maintained for the full length of the hedge.

Large leaved evergreens include Laurel and Aucuba. All large leaved hedge plants are trimmed with hand secateurs, cutting each growth separately. Width and angle of side is determined with strings as for small leaved hedges.

If hedge shears are used on large leaved plants many leaves are cut through. The cut leaves quickly brown and wither, leaving an unsightly hedge for a month or two.

Coniferous plants include the popular Western hemlock and the Pyramidal Cedar. These plants are trimmed to width as growth progresses, and the tops are removed when the desired height is reached.

Pruning on these amounts to a light trim to give a smooth and even shape, narrow a the top and wide at the base. the work is done with hedge shears or an electric trimmer.

The pruner aims at controlling the tips of the side growth from the time the hedge is planted so that no heavy branches will have to be cut later, leaving bare pruned stubs visible.

Informal hedges consist of various flowering shrubs sometimes interspersed with holly or low growing ornamental trees.

Pruning of informal hedges is governed by the type of plants being grown. They are not shaped like a formal hedge, each plant being allowed to follow its natural form.

Spring flowering shrubs are pruned directly after flowering. Summer and fall flowering shrubs in March to early April. Holly is pruned in April, but not again in August if female plants are used and berries desired for Christmas decorations. The removal of berried shoots is a form of winter pruning.

The small flowering trees can have young growths nipped back to two or three leaves during summer as is done with home garden fruit trees. This controls growth and eliminates winter pruning.

With a little care and practice the home gardener can become a proficient hedge pruner providing good quality tools are used. Nothing is gained by saving a few dollars on tools, spending extra time and energy trying to make them work, and having a poor looking job when it is finished.

For all types of pruning, keep shear and secateur blades sharp and shining. Sap discloration on the blades results in torn cuts which are slow to heal.

Electric pruners or trimmers need regular, and usually professional sharpening for easy cutting and minimum power consumption. Cuts into heavy shoots or branches, or cutting with blunt cutter, causes motor overheating and wiring burn outs.

TRUDEAU T-SHIRTS OPEN TO LIBEL SUIT?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Economy Wholesalers Ltd. of Winnipeg, manufacturer of a T-shirt which pokes fun at Prime Minister Trudeau and the Canadian dollar, is discontinuing production of the shirt because of concern over a possible libel suit, a promoter of the shirt said Tuesday.

The T-shirts, bearing the message "Trudeau Fuddlebuck" and a ripped replica of a dollar bill with a caricature of Trudeau on it, were conceived by four Kelowna businessmen.

Hugh Harris, who started the enterprise, said Tuesday the group made a deal with the Winnipeg company for 500 dozen of the shirts.

"By last week Economy had run off about 150 dozen shirts and I got a couple of dozen samples and took them to Ottawa," he said.

Harris said a couple of MPs wore the shirts in the House, but the Speaker wouldn't recognize them.

Harris said he then was telephoned by Gerry Ratner of Economy Wholesalers who said the order was cancelled and the shirts already made were to be destroyed.

"Ratner said he'd been told that if the Liberals won the election it might not be good for the firm to have produced these shirts," Harris said. "He wanted me to give back the samples he'd given me."

Harris said Ratner told him that if he proceeded with the order "his auditors might be very busy."

Harris said the group still hopes to find a manufacturer for the shirts.

Bonn Backs Neutron ... with Conditions

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — Chancellor Helmut Schmidt told Parliament today he will allow the deployment of the neutron bomb in West Germany if the Soviet Union does not make concessions in disarmament negotiations.

In a government declaration, Schmidt said he is concerned about the Soviet superiority in conventional forces in Europe. He said NATO must make maximum use of new technology to offset it.

U.S. Secretary of Defence Harold Brown arrived in Bonn Thursday to explain Presodent Jimmy Carter's decision on the bomb. He stopped off on his way to a NATO meeting in Denmark.

Schmidt said: "The German government in consultations has declared its readiness to allow the deployment of the neutron weapon on our territory if disarmament negotations do not produce results within two years of an American decision to produce it."

He laid down two conditions. He said NATO must approve the deployment in Germany and another European country must accept the weapon, too.

Schmidt's speech to the Bundestag prompted a stormy debate, in which the government coalition of Social Democrats and Free Democrats and the opposition Christian Democrats accused each other of anti-Americanism.

Schmidt lashed out at Franz Josef Straus, the Bavarian Christian Democratic leader, for his statement last week that Carter, by postponing production of the neutron bomb, had laid down at the feet of the Russians.

Heinrich Kohl, the chairman of the Christian Democratic party, retaliated by saying Schmidt had told the American people to vote for Gerald Ford against Carter.

"Your support of the neutron bomb comes too late," Kohl told Schmidt. "You were silent too long in an effort to appease the Social Democratic left wing."

Kohl said Schmidt's delay in publicly endorsing the neutron bomb contributed to the American decision to defer its production.

He said such silence ill became a man who at home and abroad at every possible opportunity tried to tell the United States government how to run its business.

Lumber Sales May Suffer

TORONTO (CP) — The president of the Ontario Lumber Manufacturers Association says the large number of unsold housing units in 1977 and the Bank of Canada's increase in the prime lending rate may restrict the growth of the lumber industry.

But M. D. Giles said that demand for lumber has been reasonably strong, with the price now hovering at the 1977 peak of about $230 a thousand board feet of 2-by-4 studs.

Giles told the association's annual meeting that strong demand for kiln-dried lumber in the United States, where two million new housing units were built last year, is largely responsible for keeping lumber prices up.

He said that altough demand for wood chips is weak, the outlook for the rest of the year is encouraging because of a strong demand by newsprint mills in the U.S.

J. P. Charpentier, marketing service manager of Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd., said that although Canada is to be metric by the end of 1980, the U.S. has not planned conversion for a number of years.

Charpentier said the industry is coming to grips with the problem by restating the old dimensions of lumber sizes into metric terminology.

Huge Fang Uncovered

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet archeologists have discovered "a huge fang" that points to the existence of hoofed animals about 60 million years ago near the Issyk Kul Lake in central Asia, Tass reported.

Victoria, Saanich Police Marking Bicycles

Victoria police will join Saanich Tuesday in marking and registering bicycles as part of a campaign against bike losses estimated last year at more than $200,000.

A police team will visit elementary schools between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. starting at Sir James Douglas Tuesday.

For those who wish to participate, police will stamp an identification number and stick a decal on each bike frame, keeping a record of each along with the owner's name and a description of the bicycle.

Saanich began the same registration program March 13 and will continue registering in the schools up to April 20.

The Victoria program will cover nine elementary schools up to April 28. It will include two hours from 7 to 9 p.m. in the evenings to permit the general public to participate.

Next month police plan to visit junior high schools and shopping centres in an effort to register as many bikes as possible.

Sgt. John Maybin said Esquimalt will also join the program. Oak Bay already has a bicycle licensing scheme which will continue without alteration.

The city police team will visit James Bay Elementary on Wednesday, Quadra on Thursday and Victoria West on Friday. Schedule for the following week are:

George Jay, April 24; Oaklands, April 25; Blanshard, April 26, Margaret Jenkins, April 27 and Burnside, April 28.

Trustees Favor Tolmie Closure

Tolmie Elementary has been selected as the most likely closure candidate by the Greater Victoria school board.

Board chairman Susan Brice said today the majority of trustees favor partial or complete closure of the school at the end of the term.

Trustees indicated their preference after a three-hour committee meeting and a final decision on the school's fate should be made at a second committee meeting tonight, Brice said.

The area is zoned commercial and light industrial, a factor which discourages parents from enrolling their children at the school.

"Tolmie has lost a lot of children even since September," Brice said.

If the school closes, its 140 students will be sent to four other schools in the area, she said.

Hampton Elementary will take 50 students, Tillicum 34, Cloverdale 37 and Burnside Elementary will accomodate about 20 former Tolmie students in addition to its regular enrolment.

If Tolmie closes, Burnside will be kept open, Brice said.

Both Tolmie and Burnside are among six schools selected for possible closure this year due to declining enrolment.

The school district held public hearings at all six schools last month and will make formal closure decisions during tonight's committee meeting.

A third meeting has been tentatively scheduled for April 18 in case the board runs out of time before it comes to a conclusion.

Trustees confined themselves last night to discussion of the Tolmie-Burnside situation.

The other four schools on the list — Margaret Jenkins, South Park, Sundance and Bank Street — will be discussed tonight.

The meeting starts at 7:30 p.m. in the board's media centre conference room.

New Radio Units For Coast Guard Cost $100,000

New radio equipment costing about $100,000 will be installed in search and rescue craft on the West Coast in the next few months.

Transport Minister Otto Lang said Monday 11 VHF-DF (Very High Frequency-Direction Finding) units, including one recently installed in the Canadian Coast Guard hovercraft CH-CGB which operates out of the Vancouver International Airport, have been ordered.

"This new equipment can home in on boats in trouble, utilizing the VHF radios that are installed on most pleasure boats and commercial vessels," Lang said.

The purchase is part of a national program to improve the coast guard's search and rescue capability.

A Mere 60 Million Mistakes

TORONTO (CP) — Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne says that if three recent surveys are correct, the postal system only makes about 60 million errors a year handling mail.

Speaking to a Liberal party meeting Wednesday, he said the mistakes represent about one per cent of the almost six billion pieces of mail handled yearly by Canada Post.

"How many of you in your businesses can claim such a minimal error rate?" he asked.

Lamontagne said the problem of poor morale among postal workers remains. Many workers do not have the sense of responsibility they should have, an attitude typical of many people in Canada, he said.

RAIL PROBE RAPPED

Keep BCR Line Open, Gov't Urged

Opposition, forest industry and municipal spokesmen urged the Socred government Wednesday to reject a recommendation to close the B.C. Railway's debt-ridden $190 million Fort Nelson extension.

The pleas came after the recommendation was made in an interim report by the royal commission examining the affairs of the BCR was tabled in the legislature.

The commission found that termination of the 400-kilometre line between Fort St. John and Fort Nelson, completed in 1971, would save taxpayers between $60 and $70 million during the next five years.

The report, submitted to the government Dec. 30, recommended that the extension be eliminated as soon as possible and no later than this spring when substantial repair work would be required.

It also urged financial aid be given the community of Fort Nelson to help soften the impact of the closure.

"It's a terrible recommendation," NDP leader Dave Barrett said.

"It is totally damaging to the rational development of the northeast sector of this province."

He said that Economic Development Minister Don Phillips, a BCR director, should make a public explanation why the government left the area with no word at all that the recommendations were as disastrous.

Phillips said the report will be presented to the BCR board of directors, and that the government would study the report.

He refused to say why the government had not tabled it until required to do so by law.

The minister said it is too late to shut down the extension this spring — because of short notice.

"It will remain running until some further decisions are made, and those further decisions will be made as soon as the report has further study."

Phillips said that the final decision will be made by the government, and refused further comment.

CRITICS, CRITICS CRITICS: W.A.C.

Members of the royal commission which criticized construction of the B.C. Railway's Fort Nelson extension are nothing but lawyers who never developed a country, former Socred premier W.A.C. Bennett said today.

"Critics, critics, critics," Bennett said today of the commissioners who said he made a mistake in embarking on the railway extension.

"That's the opinion of a few lawyers. They've never developed a country," said the former premier.

He said the same type of criticism was levelled at every project he undertook during his 20 years as premier.

Where would B.C. be today without the Peace and Columbia River developments? Bennett asked.

The report tabled in the legislature Wednesday says the Fort Nelson line will cost $60 million over the next five years and should be abandoned.

Bennett said the community is well worth an investment of $12 million a year.

"Northern development over a period of years would be one of the best investments the province would have."

Bennett said he fears the same fate is in store for the Dease Lake extension.

That extension should be completed as well, he said, and from then on negotiations should take place with Washington, D.C. and Ottawa to push the rail line right through to Alaska.

Bennett said the railway could be used to ship oil, adding that tankers sailing up and down the coast are dangerous enough in times of peace.

Worst Plunge In Months Puts Dollar Under 87¢

Times News Services

The Canadian dollar took its worst dive against its U.S. counterpart since last October on New York money markets Wednesday and continued the drop to 86.81 cents U.S. at noon today.

At the end of an active trading session Wednesday in the interbank wholesale market, the dollar was changing hands at 87.02 U.S. cents, down from the previous day's close of 87.44 U.S. cents.

At one point, heavy speculative and commercial selling of the dollar dragged the currency to 87 U.S. cents, but dealers hinted the Bank of Canada intervened to prevent any further decline.

The U.S. dollar made marginal gains against all major European currencies in early trading on foreign exchanges today.

The Canadian dollar hadn't lost as much ground against the U.S. in a single trading session since Oct. 24, 1977, when it plunged from 90.47 to 89.88 U.S. cents, a drop of 59 points.

Foreign exchange traders blamed the sharp drop on negative news coming out of Ottawa this week.

"The events of the last few days have only increased downward pressure on the dollar," said one trader.

A senior trader for the Royal Bank said the sharp drop of the dollar was not unusual because the currency has now fallen into "a new trading range."

But he noted there is no "panic" selling of the dollar similar to what was experienced last October. Instead, commercial demand for U.S. funds to cover payments for imports and other commitments is the major reason for the currency's decline, he said. "There're more buyers than sellers," he said.

Meanwhile, J.E. Toten, chief economist of the Bank of Montreal, told a seminar organized by the Conference Board in Canada here Wednesday that "Canada's international competitive position has been more or less restored as result of the devaluation which has occured."

Gov't Teaches Tips for Tips

VANCOUVER (CP) — Tourism British Columbia is sponsoring a class to teach restaurant workers how to make more money on tips.

Government and private industry spokesmen said they were worried about the impression restaurant and service-oriented workers in B.C. make on tourists after hearing rumors that B.C. workers were earning the reputation for poor and surly service.

As a result, Tourism B.C., a bureau of the tourism ministry, in conjunction with the Restaurant and Foodservices Association of B.C., decided it would hold classes to educate the workers.

Increasing your income is one of 12 courses offered in the 12-hour hospitality certificate course.

Others include: how to meet and make conversation with a stranger, techniques for remembering names and handling complaints and managing your time.

Don Bellamy, executive director of the restaurant association, said the service industry had to be made more aware of the impact personal service has on the tourism industry.

Explosive Gas Leak Mystery

ST. EUSTACHE, Que. (CP) — Provincial government technicians are searching for the source of a mysterious gasoline leak which has poured thousands of gallons of gas into the municipal sewer system, causing two explosions within 24 hours and forcing Wednesday's evacuation of a five-block section of town.

Early today, St. Eustache mayor Guy Belisle sent a formal demand to the Quebec departments of municipal affairs, environment and natural resources, asking for "financial and technical assistance."

Belisle said money was needed to pay for food and lodging for the approximately 300 people evacuated from their homes, for rebuilding of a sewage pumping station destroyed by one of the blasts, and for costs incurred by the hundreds of technicians on the scene.

Officials were at a loss to say how the gasoline has managed to leak into the sewer system over the last four months.

The explosion at the sewage station followed another blast Tuesday night in the basement of a private home while two men were using a welding torch to connect a new washing machine to the home's sewage system.

No one was hurt in that explosion, but the noise was heard for blocks and manhole covers along the street were blown eight feet into the air by the force of the blast.

A private company began flushing the sewer network late Wednesday, shortly after Quebec Environment Minister Marcel Leger granted "emergency" permission to dump the entire contents of the sewers into a nearby river.

In the last few weeks St. Eustache municipal workers have flushed almost 4,000 gallons of gasoline from the sewer network, but the normal spring thaw, accelerated by recent heavy rains, apparently spread the gasoline even further into the system.

Mayor Belisle said the smell of gasoline was noticed by merchants at a downtown shopping centre last Dec. 29. The Quebec government was immediately notified and workers began trying to find the leak.

Hair Too Short

WASHINGTON (WP) — Three U.S. Coast Guardsmen have been kicked off President Carter's honor guard because their superiors feel their hair looks too short.

The three were not allowed to take their usual places in the honor guard that welcomed president Nicolae Ceausescu of Romania Wednesday for fear "their white walls would stick out like a sore thumb" to quote the executive officer involved.

The three coast guardsmen were hauled before their skipper at the Alexandria, Va., Coast Guard station, who fined each of them $200 and busted them one rank, from seamen to seamen apprentice, for violating the rules against extreme haircuts.

PCs TAP DANSON

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative fund raisers have sent a membership card in PC Victory Club '78 to one of the country's leading Liberals, Defence Minister Barney Danson, and have asked for a $25 membership fee.

Danson says he isn't sending in his $25 just yet — he wants answers from PC president Robert Coates to a few questions first.

"I would like him to tell me who the leader is," Danson said to reporters. "He doesn't say in his letter, though he mentions Mr. Trudeau several times."

He noted that Coates said the Conservatives are "fighting to get Canada working again."

The Conservatives are better at fighting among themselves, he said.

The PC Victory Club sent out 600,000 letters to people across the country drawn from a variety of organizations, said David McMillan, a victory club official.

The lists were combed for Liberal cabinet ministers and MPs to avoid embarrassing incidents, McMillan said.

Ottawa Rejects Que. Tax Plan

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Jean Chretien said Thursday Quebec's proposals for selective reductions in its sales taxes are not acceptable to the federal government.

The federal government was prepared to subsidize Quebec to two per cent a month for the items on which the province is removing its entire eight-per-cent sales tax.

But Quebec should reconsider its position, and make the sales tax reductions apply for all products as the other provinces have agreed to do, Chretien said.

If Quebec decides to reduce its sales tax on more items, then Ottawa will extend its subsidy payments for the other items, he added.

In Monday's budget, Chretien offered $226 million to Quebec for reducing its sales tax, about two-thirds of the total expected sales-tax loss. This payment likely will be smaller now, since the subsidy payment will only be on limited items and is held at two per cent, Chretien's Commons replies indicated.

Quebec Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau said he would remove the eight-per-cent sales tax entirely for clothing, textiles, shoes and furniture, but keep it on other items.

Winner Owes It To Louie

The big winner in the Times-CJVI academy awards contest, Tressie Johns, says she owes it all to "Louie the Greek" — and the luck of the draw.

Mrs. Johns, of 764 Mt. Joy, wins a weekend for two in Hollywood for correctly identifying the best actor, actress and motion picture.

Her name was drawn Wednesday from 74 correct submissions at the Capitol Theatre.

The happy winner said she took the advice of Louie, a local oddsmaker who has never made a wrong prediction when it comes to the academy awards. His selections were in a Times article preceding the April 3 ceremony.

Mrs. Johns correctly identified Richard Dreyfuss, Diane Keaton and the picture Annie Hall.

There were thousands of contestants but only 74 correct predictions.

Winners of the book Life Goes to the Movies were: Barb Downman, 3437 Diana; Lewis Gadsby of Langford; Carole Stafford, 3281 Linwood; Sharon Myers, 2241 Millstream, and Maureen Walford, 985 Ambassador.

AirWest Trying to 'Break Union'

An Airwest Airlines strike committee member claimed today the airline will go to any lengths to break the union, even refusing to abide by previously-signed agreements.

His charge came on the heels of company president Norm Gold's statement Wednesday that efforts to reach a contract settlement had come to an end.

Gold said AirWest will begin calling the 95 employees back to work and replace those who do not return.

He said the impasse came over agreeing on a back-to-work clause.

In an official statement Wednesday, Teamsters Union spokesman Wes Anderson said:

"We believe the inability of AirWest to abide by previously-signed commitments is indicative of the companies true attitude toward reaching a collective agreement with its employees."

The company and the Teamsters Union reached agreement two weeks ago on back-to-work arrangements as well as a list of some items to be included in a collective agreement.

Other outstanding contract items were to be resolved by arbitration.

Gold said the union was asked to accept a clause which would phase in jobs over a 30-day period and refused.

He said AirWest asked for an appropriate interim period but the union rejected that request.

However, the strike committee member said today Gold, during the latest round of talks, even backed off on items that had been previously agreed to in the signed contract.

The back-to-work phase-in proposal was not in the earlier package agreed to by both parties, he said.

He said Gold seems bent on sabotaging any agreement that is reached.

"His primary objective has been all along to break the union."

He said the union will step up picketing activity in an effort to make the dispute more public.

The pilots, mechanics and office workers have been on strike since Nov. 13.

Pesticides from Soap New Saanich Industry

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

A Saanich man has started an industry that manufactures pesticides from soap.

And it's safe — there's no need to fear being poisoned if you accidentally spill some on your hands.

The venture of Sergei Condrashoff, a 46-year-old entomologist living on an Old West Saanich Road farm, is considered by Victoria federal forestry scientists a major step towards a reduction in poisonous chemicals for controlling garden, farm and forest pests.

"We plan to start a similar industry in the United States," Condrashoff said in an interview.

"Our first customer is a U.S. logging company which is concerned about the damage caused to the environment by chemical sprays."

His first soapy compound is for controlling aphids and mealy insects. The latter are mainly found on indoor plants.

"Tests conducted showed that it didn't kill bees unless severe doses were administered," he said.

"And there is no necessity to use concentrated doses."

The compound also did not kill useful insects, like the ladybug.

Condrashoff plans to develop other soap combinations to control pests like the carrot fly, root maggots and caterpillars.

Soaps for controlling pests have been known for some time but they have been over-shadowed by powerful chemicals first introduced in the early 1940s.

Some not only destroy insects, but birds and mammals.

First customer is an American logging firm worried about the damaging chemical sprays

And now many sprays are known to cause cancer and other malignant diseases in man.

Soaps are fatty acids and there are many varieties of such acids found in plants and animals. Each will act differently on insects.

Most household soaps today are only so in name. There are no pure soaps. They are either detergents or fatty acids combined with chemicals.

Condrashoff, well known as an inventor in the field of toys, worked as a scientist for 16 years at the Burnside Federal Forestry Research Station before going into private research in 1970.

"I became more and more interested in environmental problems arising from the use of hazardous chemicals," he said.

"People were also asking me for advice on the use of toxic sprays. This decided me to work on developing safe sprays for the home gardener."

He received the cooperation of the forest research station, he said.

"But they can only go so far. The job of developing sprays has to be undertaken by the private sector."

He said he also plans to combine soapy sprays with chemicals to deal with some species of insects difficult to control.

"But I will use chemicals which break down — not the kind that remain intact for years like DDT, and accumulate in the fatty tissues of animals and man."

Condrashoff carries on the development and research on sprays on his berry and cherry tree farm and calls his firm Safer Agro-Chem.

"We have just started and we still have to work out methods of marketing and distribution."

Egg Race Slow To Boil

The Great B.C. Egg Race goes Saturday despite the fact there are only three confirmed entries.

Organizers had received 250 inquiries from all parts of the province.

The race starts at 10 a.m. in the foyer of the Provincial Museum.

Despite the lack of entries, the race will be fun to watch, museum director Yorke Edwards said today.

"And we may still get a few entries before Saturday."

None of the confirmed entries is from Victoria. One is from Nanaimo and the others from the mainland.

Edwards said he is not surprised at the small number of entries.

"In Toronto, where the race originated, they had the same experience when the race was held for the first time in 1976," he said.

'An Incredible Gaffe'

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

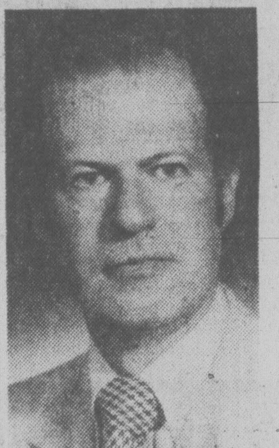
Victoria council's finance committee chairman Ald. Murray Glazier took a broadside from three provincial cabinet ministers today for statements Wednesday that the government intended to renege on promises to pay full municipal taxes.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe, Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis, and Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf, all attacked Glazier for misreading the government's new Municipalities Aid Amendment Act.

Glazier had said the bill showed the government intended to put a ceiling on the amount of taxes it would pay to the municipality, thereby sheltering $90 million of its $140-million property holdings in Victoria.

But Wolfe said Glazier had completely misread the act and had based his statements on explanatory notes, not clauses in the bill itself.



CURTIS
. . . 'Glazier just wants headline'

Wolfe said the note which says "the sums payable under subsection 1 shall not exceed 10 per cent of the sums levied for the preceding calander year," presented the former, not the new formula.

"This has been completely misinterpreted by Victoria," said Wolfe.

Curtis was harsher in his attack.

"It's an incredible gaffe — he didn't even read the bill," the minister said

"Ald. Glazier has been unwilling or unable to accept the government's statements (to pay full taxes) at face value. Apparently Ald. Glazier doesn't want the facts he just wants a headline. It's shameful on his part. One has to wonder at his motives."

He said last year at the Union of B.C. Municipalities convention he had promised that the province would begin paying full taxes to municipalities in 1978.

By introducing the Municipalities Aid Amendment Act on Monday, Curtis said he had kept that promise.

All three ministers stressed that the province intends to pay full taxes to Victoria and to all other B.C. municipalities.

Provincial holdings in Victoria total more than 100 acres. However, both municipal and provincial authorities have agreed that some of those properties such as the legislature, the Provincial Museum and other similar holdings should be exempt from taxation because of their service to the whole province.

Sorry, Sorry

Ald. Murray Glazier, contacted after the three ministers had held their joint press conference, admitted he and senior staff at city hall had misread the bill.

"It's regrettable, but it happens in the first reading of legislation sometimes," he said.

"I believe my reaction to the act was incorrect and I regret that."

Saanich Stalls, Trees Fall

While a proposed tree-cutting control bylaw remained stalled by arguments at Saanich municipal hall, one of the biggest commercial property owners in Saanich was cutting down several trees Wednesday on property at Royal Oak.

And Mayor Mel Couvelier, although angered by the situation, conceded that the municipality is powerless to act against Royal Oak Inn owner Joseph Isherwood.

"I guess he's just stripping the land. There's nothing we can do to stop him," Couvelier said.

He did say, however, that if any of the trees being felled were found to be on municipal property, Saanich would sue the company.

But Isherwood today denied that any of the trees in question were on publicly-owned land.

He also rejected the mayor's comment that healthy trees are being cut while diseased and scrub trees remain.

He claimed the main stand of timber on land adjacent to Beaver Lake Park has been left intact, and there has been only selective cutting on the Royal Oak Inn land which is within the Agricultural Land Reserve.

Some of the trees would have been blown down anyway, because an adjoining owner's tree clearing had left them exposed, and others were "in the way" of planned recreational facilities, Isherwood said.

Municipal officials sent to investigate Wednesday, following complaints from neighboring residents, later reported that about 80 good-sized trees would be removed.

But Isherwood said he didn't know the total.

He also denied a suggestion that the tree felling was prompted by a fit of pique, after Saanich council last month turned down plans for a major housing development on the Isherwood property.

The proposed tree cutting bylaw, designed mainly to curb wholesale tree removal by developers, is now in its 12th draft and earlier this week was still being criticized by some council members, citizens and community groups.

It has been referred to the newly-appointed environmental advisory committee.

McEvay Knocks Blair

. . . 'no rubber-stamping'

Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee chairman J.W. McEvay today criticized Ald. Colin Blair of Esquimalt for walking out of Tuesday's meeting on awarding of grants.

Blair stalked out without voting and without finding out how much research had been done by the vetting committee.

McEvay, also an Esquimalt alderman, said Blair was wrong to run to the media, protesting the ease with which grants were approved, without finding out how much research had actually been done.

"Had he stayed for the meeting he would have had an opportunity to fully discuss with the other elected officials and the chairman of the vetting committee (Harold Moist) each application, the financial status of the organizations applying, other sources of funding available and their contributions to the community," McEvay said.

He said elected officials are responsible for making final decisions and Moist's committee members had been chosen because of their expertise.

Serving with Moist were architect John Di Castri, Stuart Drummond, executive director of the United Way; Dr. Brian Wharf, head of social work at the University of Victoria, and Derrick Thompson, executive director of the G.R. Pearkes Clinic for the Handicapped.

Moist's committee had recommended that 12 of the 46 requests for grants be refused, McEvay said, and the intermunicipal committee had refused an additional five.

"We didn't rubber stamp what those people had done," he added.

"To opt out of one's responsibility of attending a meeting, taking part in debate and decision-making, does not give one the right to criticize," he said.

'Follow That Oil Track'

A truck driver drove 17 blocks Tuesday afternoon dripping fuel oil on city streets.

Victoria fire department said the Gulf Oil truck was at Belmont and Ryan when the delivery hose apparently got caught on something, unwound as the truck pulled away and finally broke off the tank connection.

A fire department vehicle responding to a neighbor's call followed the oily track and caught up to the truck in the 1500-block Bank, but not before more oil was spilled.

The unsuspecting driver had stopped the truck to make a delivery and started the pump before walking to the rear of the vehicle to pull out the hose and nozzle.

Without a hose, oil was gushing directly on to the street.

203 Give Their Blood

Blood donors totalled 203 at the Red Cross clinic at Spectrum School on Wednesday.

Since the start of the week, a total of 528 pints of blood have been donated at clinics at three secondary schools — Reynolds, Dunsmuir and Spectrum.

Today the clinic is being held at Oak Bay Secondary and on Friday at Mount Douglas.

MANAGER DOWNPLAYS SQUEEZE PLAY

Extra Campsites at Long Beach

Parks Canada has prepared a contingency plan to provide 500 temporary campsites if the federal government delays or decides against buying a much-needed privately-owned campground adjacent to Pacific Rim National Park at Long Beach, superintendent Frank Camp said Wednesday.

"We will look after the visitors," he said. "We have the space to accommodate camping vehicles."

Bert Braiden, Calgary developer and owner of the 217-acre, 400-site campground, wants the federal government to buy him out, and has indicated he won't open the camp this year. His asking price is said to be $3.5 million.

It had been feared closure of Braiden's campground would leave the area without enough campsites to handle visitors this summer.

Pacific Rim Park has a campground overlooking the beach at Green Point with room for only 91 vehicles, plus a walk-in beach tenting area with about 50 sites.

But superintendent Camp said Braiden hasn't got Parks Canada in a squeeze, as some people seem to think.

If Braiden's campground is closed this summer, the day-use areas in the park will be opened to campers, he said, providing 500 sites.

CAMP
. . . contingency plan

Major day-use area are at Combers Beach, Wickaninnish Inn, and an area about 1½ miles west of the Green Point campsite. There are other fairly large parking areas scattered in the park.

Camp said the day-use areas would be provided with some essential services, but not as many as those in the permanent campground at Green Point.

If the government doesn't buy the Braiden campground and it doesn't open, Parks Canada would have to consider establishing additional permanent campsites in the park, he said.

The Braiden campground borders the west end of the park, six kilometres south of Tofino.

Parks Canada encouraged the development of the private campground because its policy is to leave camping facilities at Long Beach to private enterprise.

It inherited the Green Point campground from the provincial parks branch.

Federal officials are lukewarm to taking over the Braiden property because it doesn't come up to federal standards.

Its main asset is its location. It runs along an attractive beach, joining up with Cox's beach, a favorite surfing area.

Not So Fast, Says Campbell

Capital Regional District chairman Jim Campbell said Wednesday his grants committee chairman Ald. Shirley Dowell was premature in indicating the CRD had agreed to provide $2 million towards the construction of a new civic centre in Victoria.

Campbell said that although the CRD has discussed the possibility of raising $2 million through a quarter-mill levy in the region, no decisions have been made.

"We determined that if you're looking at requirments for financing, it (the region) has the capability, but it was a hypothetical discussion . . . it wasn't intended as a commitment," said Campbell.

He added, however, that the CRD members had been receptive to the idea and were much in favor of the objectives of Dowell and Victoria Ald. Ron McKenzie.

"But we hope to do this in a very orderly way," he said.

Dowell and McKenzie, head of city council's cultural development committee, are jointly working on a feasibility study for a multi-purpose civic centre to be built adjacent to the old Crystal Gardens.

The aldermen said Monday that West Coast Credit Union has agreed to lend $5 million or more to finance the centre, and Dowell said the CRD would be willing to underwrite the loan with $2 million raised by a levy.

Japan To Push Imports

TOKYO (Reuter) — The Japanese government is planning special imports worth at least $4 billion in fiscal 1978 to reduce the country's trade and current account surplus, Kiichi Miyazawa, director-general of the Economic Planning Agency, says.

Miyazawa told a parliamentary budget committee meeting that emergency imports totalling $1.02 billion for fiscal 1977, ended last month, have almost all been received, except for some agricultural products.

Toshio Komoto, international trade and industry minister, said earlier that a special cabinet meeting would be called soon to discuss new surplus trimming measures.

The current account surplus was expected to reach at least $13 billion in fiscal 1977 compared with an estimate last October of about $10 billion.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 45-year-old Sidney woman, who told Judge Harold Alder in provincial court Wednesday she was blinded and confused by a Dec. 15 police roadblock and that two Saanich officers were curt and oblivious to her handicap, was convicted of impaired driving and refusing a breath test demand.

Dorothea Griffiths, 2316 Amelia, was fined $300 for the impaired driving and $100 on the refusal to take the test.

Alder said the difficulty often was that impairment was not limited to illegal things and could be something physical, as it was in this case. Mrs. Griffiths told the court she had a polio attack in 1953 which left her with difficulty walking.

Alder ruled that the only explanation was that Mrs. Griffiths had too much to drink and it suddenly hit her and that she did not complete the breath test as ordered.

He said she came over the crest of a hill on the Pat Bay Highway near Elk Lake, came to an emergency which was faced by some 100 other cars and not only ran over flares, but became confused and almost hit constables Neil McKinley and Geoff Wilde, as well as coming within 25 feet of a person lying on the pavement.

She testified she had a glass of wine with dinner and a liqueur afterwards that evening. She then went to the senior NCOs' and officers' mess at Bay Street Armoury where she had a total of two, one-ounce drinks of white rum.

On her way home, she encountered "a maze of lights, confusion" near Elk Lake.

She testified an officer brusquely told her to get out of the car, but she refused because the pavement was wet and she wasn't wearing shoes because of her handicap. She said she was pulled out of the car and escorted to a police van. The two officers appeared angry, warned her about being uncooperative and placed her in the van, despite her telling them to leave her alone for a minute so that she could enter the vehicle on her own.

"They pushed me around physically," she said, "I was very confused but I couldn't physically resist."

At the Saanich police station, she was physically taken down stairs and then handcuffed to a chair, she said.

Mrs. Griffiths said she did blow into the breathalyzer and that one officer told her it registered .04. But the other officer said it wasn't good enough, she continued, and, after three tries, angrily threw down his pen and said, "Aw forget it, you're not trying."

She acknowledged that she refused to sign an appearance notice because "I didn't feel it was right to sign anything until I had someone tell me it was all right."

Her brother, Ray Wilson, of 1900 Doney, testified he was following his sister from Bay Street but lost her near the Royal Oak hill.

Wilson, who was a member of the RCMP for 20 years, said he also came upon a massive bank of lights including two police vehicles with headlights on facing northbound traffic in the wrong lane. Wilson said he spotted his sister's car off to the left just as an officer came out of the headlight glare and waved him on.

He said he went to the police station to pick up his sister when McKinley sarcastically greeted him with the question, "Do you think you can handle her by yourself?"

He said he then drove his sister to Sidney RCMP detachment where a request for a breath test was refused.

He then suggested to Mrs. Griffiths that she get a blood sample and she stated that she phoned Rest Haven hospital where a nurse eventually told her it was not possible because her physician was not available and no arrangements could be made at that hour.

In his summation, defence lawyer Jeffrey Green said it was unfortunate police took the approach they did and that the two officers admitted during the trial they were angry.

"I think they may have gone too far in this case in the way they treated Mrs. Griffiths," he said.

He said the officers weren't reasonable and conducted themselves in a shocking manner.

Also fined for drinking-driving were Ezra Leah Roodenburg, 896 Hyacinth, $500; Walter Philip Quaite, 20, of 19 Midwood, $500; John Daniel Hennessey, 24, of 2814 Sooke, $500; Ian Bruce Anderson, 17, of 1319 Justine Place, $300; and Brenda Nancy White, 32, of 870 Tolmie, $200.

In addition, Hennessey was fined $250 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident and Mrs. White was ordered to perform 75 hours of community service work.

Too Many Parents

DEAR ABBY: our daughter is being married soon and I am making plans for a formal church wedding, dinner and reception.

My problem is that the young man who is marrying our daughter has too many parents.

His mother is presently married to her fifth husband! Worse yet, all four of her ex-husbands have remarried and she's friendly with all of them. To make matters more sticky, the boy's real father has a wife and two ex-wives with whom he is on friendly terms. I have been instructed to send invitations to all of these ex's. Should I?

How about the receiving line? We will be the laughing stock of this city if we have all those ex-husbands and ex-wives in the receiving line.

BRIDE'S BEFUDDLED MOM.

DEAR BEFUDDLED: Invite the friendly "ex's" to the wedding but ask only the groom's biological parents and their present spouses to stand in the receiving line.

DEAR ABBY: A reader asks, "What does a deliberately childless couple say to the "go forth and multiply" relatives and friends who harass them to be fruitful?"

Simple: Roll your eyes upward, look sad and sigh, "Oh, if we only could!"

Those few words are guaranteed to turn hostility and unwarranted nosiness into instant sympathy — and never again will you be bothered with that suggestion.

JACK B.

DEAR JACK: Why pretend you can't "multiply" when you can but choose not to for good and legitimate reasons?

DEAR ABBY: A year ago my husband had a nervous breakdown. In other words, he was mentally ill. After six months of psychiatric treatment he committed suicide. He was 28. I was 27 and left with two children.

My problem: When people find out that I am a widow, they invariably ask, "What happened to your husband?"

I'm not about to make up any lies, but I can't bring myself to tell anyone that my husband killed himself. My children are not yet old enough to understand what suicide is, so I am not faced with telling them yet. For the present I'm tellig the children their Daddy got sick and died, which is true, and something I'll not have to retract when the time comes to tell them the whole story.

But what do I tell people who ask me now? I'd like to have a pat answer that would politely say, "it's none of your business." Any ideas?

WIDOW

DEAR WIDOW: There is no polite way to say, "It's none of your business." Besides it will only arouse curiosity.

It will be easier for you in the long run if you realize that it is no reflection on you that your husband took his life. He was sick. The truth is always the best response, but you're not obligated to provide the details. Simply say your husband was ill and took his own life, and you'd rather not talk about it. That should put an end to any further questioning.

Balancing the Calorie Budget

Food for Thought

By Dr. JEAN MAYER and Dr. JOHANNA DWYER

We are just emerging from the fattest time of the year. The so-called "fat months" usually start in December, with the holiday feasts and first storms of the winter.

Most of us tend to eat and drink too much during the holidays, and then use the bad weather as an excuse to stay indoors watching TV or reading a book (while munching high-calorie snacks) rather than "working off" the extra calories in some sort of outdoor activity.

Since this winter has been particularly harsh in many areas, we suspect that many people will find that they need even more shaping up than usual. All too often, the temptation is to go on a crash diet, but we would like to urge a more logical, mathematical approach. And since many of you have just been through the annual taxtime budget crunch, balancing off caloric intake versus expenditure should have a familiar ring. It goes something like this:

Let's suppose that you are a relatively inactive housewife in your early 50s. You weigh 145 pounds, and you would like to lose 20 pounds before you go on your vacation in August. The first step is to determine how many calories a day you are now consuming. To do this, keep a careful record of what and how much you eat for a week. Using a calorie counter, you can get a good estimate of the number of calories you are taking in each day. Let's suppose it averages out to 2,200 calories a day.

Now you need to figure out how many calories you expend in a typical day. It might go something like this: 8 hours of routine housework, walking around the house, etc., 1.9 calories per minute or a total of 912; 1 hour washing, dressing, etc., 2 calories per minute or 120; 1 hour shopping, driving, etc., 1.8 calories per minute or 108; 6 hours of sitting, reading, etc., 1.3 calories per minute or 468; 8 hours in bed, .8 per minute or 384. This adds up to a total of almost 2,000 calories expended each day.

Since your intake is 200 calories more than your expenditure, and there are 3,500 calories in a pound of fat, you can expect to gain nearly two pounds a month, or an eight-pound weight gain during the winter months.

While losing these extra pounds may seem harder than putting them on, it is also a matter of mathematical logic. If you eliminate those 200 extra calories a day by, say, forgoing five teaspoons of sugar in coffee and tea and substituting an apple for ice cream as your dessert, you would be in caloric balance, burning up as many calories as you consume. But if you reduce your caloric intake by 500 more calories a day and maintain your present level of activity, you'll lose about a pound a week, meaning that you'll reach your goal of 125 pounds in 20 weeks.

As an alternative to cutting down 500 more calories, you could add two hours of walking to your daily activity, which will burn up 240 of those calories. If you decide to take off only a pound a week, you'll need to reduce your caloric intake by 260 calories instead of 500. And if you decide to do both — walk two hours a day and consume only 1,500 calories, which is still enough to maintain proper nutrition — you'll lose 20 pounds in about 13 weeks.

Of course, the more vigorous the physical activity, the more calories the activity consumes. Bicycling, for example, can burn up about 100 calories in 15 minutes. Swimming for an hour consumes nearly 600 calories, depending upon the stroke used and the temperature of the water. Twenty minutes of jogging will burn up 300 to 350 calories.

Like balancing your household budget, every little bit adds up. Walking up a couple of flights of stairs instead of taking the elevator; walking those four or five blocks to the store instead of driving; even pacing back and forth while you talk on the telephone will consume more calories than sitting watching TV to reading a novel. By the same token, a glass of beer, a handful of peanuts or potato chips, a couple of cookies or a donut with your midmorning coffee, all add unnecessary calories.

Maintaining your proper weight, just like living on a budget, does not need to be a constant struggle. Instead, it's all a matter of knowing how much you have to spend, and doing it with a bit of common sense.

SUDDEN DIZZINESS

By L. L. COLEMAN, M.D.

When I lie down or when I make a sudden change in position, the room turns, I get dizzy, and feel faint. I don't have high blood pressure, which is what worries me. What else can cause this? — Mrs. K. R.

Dear Mrs. R.:

These transient episodes of dizziness and faintness, with or without nausea, can be caused by rapid changes of position. Many people whose blood pressure is normal may have what is called "relative low blood pressure."

It has been commonly observed that such people frequently complain of these momentary feelings of dizziness. Most often it is associated with poor eating habits, especially with long intervals of no eating.

A careful physical examination can rule this out and also rule out the possibility of low blood sugar. The blood circulation, the condition of the inner ear, the heart and lungs, too, can be explored as possible factors in the production of these uncomfortale moments.

In the meantime, try to avoid making rapid changes of position. Lying down should be a slow process. Similarly, when you rise in the morning, get up slowly so that your blood circulation to the brain can accommodate itself. In addition, you might try increasing your protein for breakfast with cottage cheese or similar cheeses.

Try to limit your salt and fluid intake moderately. Before embarking on such a regime, a telephone call to your doctor will give you added assurance.

Why aren't there laws against tattoo parlors? My son is 23 and foolishly allowed himself to be tattooed along with two other friends. Can these tattoos be removed? — Mr. L. L.

Dear Mr. L.:

Many tattoo parlors have been ruled as being illegal. In some areas where they are still permitted, tatooing is under constant inspection by the local boards of health. For there are constant dangers to health in tattooing. Hepatitis and even syphilis have been reported in people who had been tattooed with infected needles.

Unfortunately, many young people fall into the trap of being pressured by their friends to join them in being tattooed. Almost always they regret it immediately thereafter. But regretting is not a technique for eradicating these marks on the skin.

The armed forces constantly point out the hazards of tattooing, warning the men that eventually they'll be sorry for having had it done. The warnings are apparently mot sufficient dissuaders.

Plastic surgeons have devised all kinds of techniques for removing tattoos. None of the methods are nearly as effective as staying away from a tattoo parlor.
